WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—The Committee charged by the Republican caucus with the duty of rearranging the Standing Committees of the Senate, reported to a caucus held in the Senate chamber this morning. The report, instead of making the relation of Senator SCHURZ to the party a subject of contention, adroitly turned attention from him to the San Domingo business. At the request of Senator HAMLIN, he was relieved from serving as Chairman of the District of Columbia Committee, and Mr. PATTERSON was put in his place. Here was an opportunity too good to be lost sight of for strengthening the Administration in an important particular, and the Committee did not fail to see it. Mr. PATTERSON was a member of the Committee on Foreign Relations, and was known to be hostile to the acquisition of San Domingo, and on the pretext that he ought not to be Chairman of one important committee and still retain connection with another, still more important, his name was displaced on the list of Foreign Relations Committee by that of Senator CONKLING, supposed to have an opposite opinion on this particular subject. When this report was made, an earnest, though by no means an angry debate, lasting for some time, sprung up. San Domingo was in everybody's mind, though nobody mentioned it. Mr. WILSON asked Mr. PATTERSON whether he personally desired to leave the Foreign Relations Committee, and Mr. PATTERSON said he did not. In fact, it was understood he strongly desired to remain. Again, though not spoken aloud, the fact was made known that, aside from the bearing of the change on San Domingo, it was personally distasteful to Mr. SUMNER, who at his own request was excused from service with Mr. CONKLING on the Committee for the revision of the law, after the memorable speech of the latter on the Census law, last Summer. Furthermore, Mr. CONKLING promptly declined being the cause of dissension. So the report was recommitted to the Committee for revision, and was subsequently reported with the Committee on Foreign Relations unchanged, and in that form was adopted. The other changes in the Committees are such as were indicated last night. Mr. HARRIS, of Louisiana, who was second on the Committee on the District of Columbia, takes Mr. PATTERSON'S place as Chairman of the Joint Committee on Retrenchment.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

The Senate held its first Executive Session today, and referred the nominations which were sent in, over 100 in number. The nomination of Mr. DELANO as Secretary of the Interior was then promptly confirmed. There will be a session to-morrow, which, it is understood, will be chiefly devoted to Executive business. The calendar will be taken up and gone through with, and all the nominations confirmed which are not objected to. There promises to be a lively contest over the nomination of BLANCHARD as Postmaster at New-Orleans, vice Gen. LOWELL, suspended at the behest of Gov. WARMOTH. Both the Louisiana Senators will probably oppose it, and as the Senate has frequently adhered to the doubtful practice of refusing to confirm a nominee who is obnoxious to the Senator in whose State the office is located, the present nomination will probably be defeated.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

The House Committee on Foreign Affairs met today and briefly considered the work before them. That portion of the President's Message referring to our relations with Great Britain was referred to Mr. BANKS, and that portion referring to San Domingo to Judge ORTH. Measures covering the President's recommendations will be matured for the Committee's consideration at once.

C. W. FIELD AND THE CUBAN CABLE COMPANY.

It will be remembered that at the last session CYRUS W. FIELD made charges against the International Cuban Cable Company, and that a Subcommittee of the House Committee of Commerce was appointed to investigate the subject during the recess. This Committee met in New-York about two months ago, and was then coolly informed by Mr. FIELD that all his difficulties with the Cuban Company had been arranged, and that there would be no occasion for any investigation by the Committee. The gentlemen comprising the Committee were somewhat surprised at the conduct of Mr. FIELD, and declined to be disbanded at his behest. An informal report of the facts was made today to the full Committee, and the result is that the charges are held not to be withdrawn, and the Committee will go on with the investigation, examining Mr. FIELD, as well as merchants and others who have done business with the Cable Company.

RIVER AND HARBOR IMPROVEMENTS.

The Commerce Committee of the House today revived the Sub-committee on River and Harbor Improvements of last session, viz.: Messrs. DIXON, CONGER, SAWYER, POTTER and FINKELNBURG.

THE NEW SENATOR FROM ALABAMA.

The election of a Democratic Senator from Alabama by one majority when there were Republicans enough to have returned Senator WARNER, excites considerable indignation here among Republicans, in and out of Congress. The result is attributed to the unmanly, ungenerous course of Senator SPENCER, whose political vision has not scope enough to see that he has not only done the party great injury, but effectually ended his own political life. Judge GOLDTHWAITE, the Senator elect, is highly spoken of, and will be admitted without doubt.

THE GRADE OF ADMIRAL.

As foreshadowed in these dispatches last night, the name of Vice-Admiral PORTER was sent to the Senate today for confirmation as Admiral. The probabilities are that he will be confirmed, and that action will be taken to abolish the grades of Admiral and Vice-Admiral when they shall again become vacant. Secretary ROBESON urges the confirmation.

BUSINESS BEFORE SENATE COMMITTEES.

The Senate Committee on Finance has no important bills on its files, and it will be in no hurry to put before Congress any propositions of its own or to act on any that may come to it from the Senate. At present there is a disposition to wait for the action of the House. It will probably hold no meeting till its regular day next Tuesday. Contrary to statements that have been made, no important business is under consideration by the Judiciary Committee, remaining over from last session, or otherwise, and no special meeting is expected. The regular day of meeting is Wednesday.

SAN DOMINGO.

The San Domingo question is the most prominent one before the Committee on Foreign Relations, though perhaps not the most important. The Committee is supposed to have a majority of one against acquisition on any terms. But this is not so certain. Some Senators who voted against the treaty last session, express a willingness to support the action asked for by the President, and it may turn out that an additional member of the Committee may entertain the same view. It is not thought however, that the Committee will reverse its expression of last session.

THE VIRGINIA INTEREST.

According to Gov. WALKER'S latest utterances, the holders of Virginia bonds have not a very bright prospect of receiving their interest at an early day. The Governor made a speech, yesterday, at the Tobacco Exchange banquet, in which he said that he had received many letters inquiring when the payment of interest would be resumed. In reply, he could only say that when the burden of Federal taxation was removed from Virginia she would be able to resume such payment. An examination into the character of the Federal taxation from which Virginia suffers, shows that this is equivalent to indefinite postponement, if not absolute repudiation. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1870, Virginia paid an aggregate internal revenue tax of $5,496,351 39; of this amount tobacco and spirits paid $4,822,243 30; leaving only $664,108 09 received from all other sources. Now, as tobacco and spirits are above all other articles, sources from whence permanent income is to be derived, it will be seen that if Gov. WALKER'S proposition is acted on, the credit of the State enjoys very limited prospect of improvement.

GENERAL AMNESTY.

The question of general amnesty through Congress was incidentally considered in the House today. Gen. BUTLER asked for the reprinting of his bill of last session, when Mr. COX asked how soon he intended to bring it up. Gen. BUTLER said if there was no objection he would bring it up on Tuesday next, after the morning hour. There was no objection, and it will, therefore, probably come up some time next week.

POSTAGE AND FRANKING.

The House today was chiefly further occupied with the consideration of the revised Postal laws, the time being entirely taken up in discussing the chapter on the franking privilege, for which Mr. FARNSWORTH yesterday submitted a substitute. After various amendments to this substitute it was rejected, and then, on motion of Mr. HILL, the chapter itself was stricken out, which, in effect, abolishes the franking privilege, as this codifying act repeals all other Postal laws. The motion to strike out was carried by only about seventeen majority, many members preferring to vote for a modification of the bill. Postmaster-General CRESWELL was on the floor at the side of Mr. FARNSWORTH during the discussion. As this bill is a complete revision of all the laws regulating the postal service, and as it is the joint product of the efforts of the United States Codifying Commission, the Special Board appointed by the Postmaster-General and the House Post-office Committee, it is therefore a matter of unusual importance, and requires very careful deliberation. There is not a law on the statute book touching postal matters which has not been revised, and its essential features incorporated in this new codification.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

DECLINE OF COMMERCE.

The Select Committee on the Decline of American Commerce, of which Representative LYNCH is Chairman, will hold their first meeting, this session, to-morrow. The entire subject, as heretofore referred, is still before them, and a report will be made at an early day. As usual, so much of the President's Message as relates to that matter, was referred to the Committee on Commerce, this being a Standing Committee, not, however, involving any conflict with the subjects before the Special Committee.

REDEMPTION OF LOAN CERTIFICATES.

The Secretary of the Treasury, today, gave orders to the Assistant Treasurer at New-York to notify the holders of the three per cent. temporary loan certificates, issued under the acts of 2d March, 1867, and 25th July, 1868, that all such certificates bearing date 15th October, 1867, of the denomination of $500 each, between the numbers 249 and 356, inclusive, and of the denomination of $1,000 each, between the numbers 193 and 359, inclusive, will be paid on presentation at his office; and that from and after 31st January, 1871, such certificates will cease to bear interest, and will be no longer available as a portion of the lawful money reserve in the possession of any national banking association. The aggregate amount of the certificates described is $2,000,000, making the total amount advertised thus far $4,000,000.

CONSUL TO ROUMANIA.

The President has addressed the following letter to Mr. PEIXOTTE, the new United States Cousul to Roumania:

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 8, 1870.

The bearer of this letter, Mr. B. F. PEIXOTTE, who has accepted the important though unremunerative position of United States Consul to Roumania, is commended to the good offices of all representatives of this Government abroad. Mr. PEIXOTTE has undertaken the duties of his present office more as a missionary work for the benefits of the people he represents, than for any benefit to accrue to himself—a work in which all good citizens will wish him the greatest success. The United States, knowing no distinction of her own citizens on account of religion or nativity, naturally believes in a civilization the world over, which will secure the same universal liberal views.

The Nelson Wife Murder—Trial of George Nelson.

In the Court of General Sessions yesterday, before Judge BEDFORD, GEORGE NELSON was placed on trial, charged with the murder of his wife by beating and kicking her on the 29th of June, from the effects of which, it is alleged, she died on the 4th July following.

The first witness called was MARGARET NELSON, a little girl about thirteen years old, the daughter of the accused. She testified that she saw her father and mother together at a stand kept by her mother in the street near where they lived; that night she did not sleep at home, but returned in the morning and found her mother in bed, with her face bruised and blackened and her eyes closed; her mother could not speak then; she was removed to Bellevue the next day, and died on the 4th of July.

HANNA CROSBY testified that she lives at No. 455 Greenwich-street; the accused and his wife lived in the basement of the same house; he left the house on the night in question, about nine o'clock, drunk; about eleven o'clock F. M. his wife came in and began calling him names; she went out soon after and he followed her; they came in again, and while in the hall she exclaimed, "See what he is doing to me"; about a quarter of an hour after the door of their room was locked, and witness heard nothing further; in the morning she saw Mrs. NELSON lying in bed suffering from some bruises on the head; NELSON did not return home after that night.

Officer STEVENS testified that he arrested NELSON in Hoboken on the 1st of July. The statement of the house surgeon of Bellevue Hospital was then offered in evidence and objected to, being now in Europe.

Counsel for the defense, in opening, stated that they would endeavor to show that Mrs. NELSON was a woman of intemperate habits and her death the result of continued intoxication.

Several witnesses were introduced to prove the previous good character of NELSON, and one or two to show the intemperance of the deceased. The case was summed up on both sides, and the Judge adjourned the Court, reserving his charge until today.

The Crispins' Strike.

The Committee of Conference, composed of six representatives from the Crispin Association and a like number of the employers, will meet today, to discuss points of difference and, if possible, arrive at a satisfactory solution of existing difficulties. It is likely that their deliberations will eventuate in the reference of the questions in dispute to arbitration. From inquiries made by our reporter, it would appear that the strike is by no means as extensive as at first supposed. Many establishments have all the men they require working at the reduced wages. It is stated that some of the employers contemplate introducing "Chinese cheap labor," and with this view are in correspondence with the manufacturers in Massachusetts who have tried the experiment.

Deserved Punishment of Swindlers.

At the Court of Special Sessions yesterday, WILLIAM HOWARD and WILLIAM H. JACKSON were arraigned on complaint of H. H. MILLER, of Waterbury, Conn., who charged them with swindling him out of $10. The accused carried on operations at No. 59 John-street under the names of Logan & Co., forwarding circulars by mail to various parts of the country, in which they offered to sell counterfeit money and jewelry at cheap rates. MILLER bought a package under the supposition that it contained jewelry, but found it to be filled with bits of tin-foil on opening it at his hotel. An examination of the rooms occupied by the accused revealed letters from hundreds of apparently respectable persons who were willing to engage in the business of passing bad bills. It was ascertained that they received $30,000 in forty-seven days from duped persons, and that their correspondents included a large number of Postmasters. HOWARD and JACKSON were sent to the Penitentary for six months each by Justice DOWLING.

Personal.

In alluding, the other day, to an apology made by the Dispatch, of this City, for the persons who hold office under Tammany Hall, while assuming to control Republican associations, we omitted to mention that Col. DUGANNE, the late editor, is no longer responsible for the sentiments of that paper.

Mr. SAMUEL YORKE ATLEE, for many years Librarian of the Treasury Department at Washington, has just passed through this City en route for San Francisco, where he is to assume the editorial direction of the New Age. The varied experience and well-matured talents of Mr. ATLEE cannot fail to gain for him a reputation on the Pacific slope.

THE ITALIAN PARLIAMENT.

FLORENCE, Dec. 6.—Parliament was opened on Monday by King VICTOR EMMANUEL. The King, in his speech from the throne, declared that with Rome as capital the edifice commenced by CHARLES ALBERT was crowned and the freedom of Italy completed. It was now the task of the Chambers to make her great and happy. "While we are thus happy," he continued, "two nations, glorious representatives of civilization, are engaged in a horrible struggle. We will persist in our efforts to induce them to end the conflict, and prove that United Italy is an element of order, liberty, and peace in Europe." In reference to the Pope, His Majesty said it was the duty of the nation to secure to the Supreme Pontiff the free exercise of his religious offices and the maintenance of his relations with the Catholic world. Improvements in the administration of the Government and development of the military and educational systems were promised. In regard to the election of the Prince AMADEUS to the throne of Spain, the King said: "A sister nation has invited our son to rule over its destinies. We rejoice in the great honor conferred on our dynasty, and hope that it will bring equivalent benefits to Spain." The speech concluded with congratulations on the present condition and hopes for the future career of the nation, and was received with enthusiastic cheers by the members.

VERSAILLES, Dec. 6, via LONDON, Dec. 6—9 P. M.—The French were utterly defeated at Orleans. Ten thousand were made prisoners and seventy-seven pieces of artillery, including several mitrailleuses, and four gun-boats on the Loire were captured.

BERLIN, Dec. 6.—King WILLIAM has forwarded the following dispatch to Queen AUGUSTA, under date of Versailles, Dec. 5:

"The City of Orleans was occupied by our forces last night without being stormed. The Third Corps took nine cannon and one mitrailleuse. The Eighth Corps of the first army on the 4th inst. beat the French in several conflicts north-east of Rouen, taking one gun and 400 prisoners. Our loss was only one killed and forty wounded."

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 6.—The Russian Government has forwarded dispatches to the Government at Vienna, Florence, Tours and Constantinople, with regard to the Black Sea question. They are similar to those addressed to BARON VON BRUNNOW, the Russian representative at London. The general tenor of all these dispatches is that the Russian demands are essential to the maintenance of the peace of Europe.

NATIONAL BOARD OF TRADE.

Second Day's Session at Buffalo—Transportation of Imported Goods Inland—The Civil Service—Grain Transportation—Cotton—Non-Resident Traders—Gen. Walbridge.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Dec. 8.—The National Board of Trade met at 9 A. M., today, and almost immediately the delegates from Louisville took their seats. After the usual preliminary proceedings, the Board considered several questions of public importance. First, that of importations direct to interior towns and cities. Resolutions were passed unanimously, asking for a modification by the Government of the regulations in regard to the transportation of imported goods from the seaport to the interior, and taking the ground that it is not necessary that cars or vessels should contain no other goods than those shipped in bond for immediate transportation; that common carriers should not be required to bear the expense of Customs inspectors, and that some plan should be devised at once whereby merchandise can be transferred directly from the vessel wherein it was imported to its place of destination.

CIVIL SERVICE.

Resolutions were reported and unanimously agreed to, expressing the conviction that the condition of the civil service is such at present that it has become a matter of grave public importance, and that there is a growing necessity for its reform, and that the early passage of a proper Civil Service law is required both for the moral and material interests of the country.

GRAIN TRANSPORTATION.

On the subject of the transportation of grain, resolutions were passed requesting railroad companies to give to all shippers of grain such bills of lading as would be good at the place of delivery for the quantities specified as received, and asking the Legislatures of the different States to pass laws compelling railroad companies to weigh grain taken by them and to give a receipt for the amount, and requiring them to deliver the quantity specified at the place of destination or to pay for deficiencies. In reference to the cental system, a memorial to Congress was adopted, asking that body to pass a bill for the establishment of that system of measurement in the handling of grain and other similar articles.

COTTON TARE—NON-RESIDENT TRADERS.

Resolutions were then adopted urging in strong terms the allowance of tare on cotton. The Board having previously adopted resolutions recommending the abolition of all State laws discriminating against non-resident traders and agents, a resolution was introduced asking Congress to pass a law overriding these local regulations. The resolution did not obtain the two-thirds vote necessary for its passage, and thus failed of adoption. The final vote on the resolution was: For, 38; against, 28.

MEMORY OF GEN. WALBRIDGE.

After the disposal of the above subject, the death of Gen. HIRAM WALBRIDGE was referred to. A resolution of respect to his memory was passed, and eloquent and feeling tributes to his services to trade were made by delegates. Gen. WALBRIDGE presided at the Convention held at Detroit, and until the present session has attended each succeeding meeting of the National Board of Trade. The Board then adjourned until 9 A. M. to-morrow. This evening the delegates are entertained at the Buffalo Club House.

CANADA.

Newspaper Comment on the President's Message in Montreal.

MONTREAL, Dec. 8.—The Canadian papers comment variously on President GRANT'S Message. The question of the fisheries attracts the greatest attention. The Gazette (Ministerial organ) attempts to show the inconsistency of the President's complaints with the Treaty of 1818. It says while Canada is always ready to negotiate for the settlement of all matters in dispute, it cannot submit to any stand-and-deliver arguments. The Herald (Independent) takes a more moderate view of the subject, and trusts there will be sufficient right feeling among the people of both countries to get over the existing difficulties.

MONTGOMERY, Dec. 8.—In the House of Representatives to-day, DAVIS, Democrat, was recast without a dissenting vote. The case of the Governorship was resumed today in court. Mr. BRAR, who presided over the Senate before Lieut.-Gov. MORAN was inaugurated, and refused to count the votes for Governor, was on the stand as a witness. He swore that he was consulted beforehand, and accepted the service only on a writ of injunction. He also swore that a bill was drawn in which Ex-Gov. SMITH was the complainant and he (BRAR,) the defendant, and that he (BRAR) swore to the allegations in the bill of complaint. The bill was afterward withdrawn. At 5 o'clock, the whole case assuming a new phase; Judge RICE, counsel for SMITH, asked for a postponement until to-morrow morning, on the ground that by the morning the case could be settled. The counsel for Mr. LINDSAY made the same statement, and asked for a postponement. It is generally thought now that SMITH will cease all opposition, and LINDSAY quietly take possession to-morrow.

MURPHY, of the late Confederate Army, for coal seized here at the beginning of the war, which has been on trial in the United States Circuit Court here, before Judge EMMONS, for the past week, was decided last night by a verdict for the plaintiff for about $40,000. Motion was made for a new trial.... AMOS CONLIN, who killed BELL PORTER two years since, has been sentenced to prison for fifteen years.

Indictment of Richmond Judges of Election for Non-Enforcement of the Fifteenth Amendment—The National Tobacco Association.

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 8.—JOHN HAGAN, Jr., and W. F. ROGERS, judges of election, have been indicted by the United States Grand Jury for violating the act requiring a proper enforcement of the provisions of the Fifteenth Amendment at the election here on the 7th of November. The charges are that they made a distinction between white and colored voters who were in line at the polls, therefore violating that provision of the law which requires that no distinction shall be made on account of race, color or previous condition.

The National Tobacco Association has adjourned. All the old officers were re-elected. This evening the delegates remaining in the city were entertained at the Spottswood Hotel.

THE WEST.

The New-Mexico Legislature—Legality of the Session Question—Rich Silver Mines.

SANTA FE, New-Mexico, Dec. 8.—Both Houses of the New-Mexican Legislature are in session, but they merely meet and adjourn from day to day, without transacting any business until it can be determined whether the session is legal or not. Some of the lawyers, and nearly all the members of the Legislature, hold that the first of the biennial sessions provided for by the laws of Congress can be held now, while others hold that the first of these sessions should not be held until Dec. 1, 1871. Inquiries have been sent to Washington in regard to the dispute....Considerable excitement has been created here by the arrival of parties from the Ralston and Silver City silver mines with immensely rich specimens of ore. In a rock of 80 pounds 50 ounces of silver were obtained; another specimen yielded 10 ounces of silver from 22 pounds of rock; and many specimens are estimated at $8,000 per ton. Quite a number of persons are getting ready to start for these mines....The weather is delightful.

Burning of a Theatre in Cincinnati—The Methodist Book Concern Damaged.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Dec. 8.—The Winter Garden Theatre, on Fourth-street here, was totally destroyed by fire last night. The fire communicated to the roof of the Methodist Book Concern, which was in great danger at one time of being destroyed. The theatre was owned by DANIEL H. CARPENTER, whose loss is $8,000. The loss to the Methodist Book Concern, which was damaged by fire and water, is variously estimated. The loss on the stock is $15,000, on which there is $40,000 insurance, all in home companies, except the London and Liverpool and Springfield, $5,000 each, and the Bay State $3,000. The damage to the building is about $10,000; insured in home companies for $2,000, and the Manhattan and Home for $5,000 each.

A Reprobate Son—The Public Warned Against Him by His Father—National Jewish University—A Revenue Bond Case Compromised.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 8.—A. L. TINKER, a prominent citizen and attorney of Painesville, Ohio, warns the public against honoring drafts or checks issued by his son and signed J. T. TINKER, or the old law firm's name of A. L. TINKER & SON. The firm was long ago dissolved. Young TINKER has absconded, and is now swindling his own and his father's friends by issuing fraudulent checks on Painesville banks, getting them cashed under various pretenses. He has operated in Erie, Buffalo, New-York, New-London, and Bucyrus, Ohio.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 8.—The Jews here are moving to secure the location of the National Jewish University. A prominent Israelite of Lawrenceburg has taken the initiative by offering $10,000.

....The case of the United States against the estate and sureties of ALFRED P. STONE, Collector of the Seventh Ohio District, five years ago, for a bond claimed to have been forfeited for non-compliance with law, was compromised today by the defendant paying $50,000.

FRAUDS IN THE INDIAN SERVICE.

Revelations by an Ex-Chairman of the Board of Indian Commissioners—The President Promises an Investigation.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Mr. WM. WELSH, of Philadelphia, formerly the Chairman of the Board of Indian Commissioners, had an interview with the President yesterday, and subsequently made a semi-official report to the Secretary of the Interior. He returned on the 2d inst. from his visit to the eleven tribes of the Sioux and the Poenacs, all of whom are on the Missouri River. He introduced and assisted the five new agents that were appointed by the President on the nomination of the missionary societies of the Protestant Episcopal Church. The report will encourage the friends of Indian civilization, as it gives illustrations of the readiness of that long-neglected people to profit by the presence among them of Christian ministers and teachers. Arrangements were made to establish schools, and to be followed by missions at an early day. The Governor of Dakota, having been removed from the Indian Superintendency by the President, certain abuses at the agency have been reformed. Mr. WELSH exposes the malpractices in the Indian office, which have long existed there. He saw Texas cattle, last month, that cost 2¾ cents from the drovers, delivered at the reservation, for which special favor the contractor of the Indian Bureau was paid 6½ cents per pound; $450,000 were paid for beef at this price within four months; 25,000 sacks of flour, 98 pounds each, costing $2 26 at Sioux City, were paid for at $8 50. Some $750,000 were paid to one person, the profit being about $300,000. The freight up the river was also paid at extortionate prices. Mr. WELSH asks that the whole subject be referred to the Board of Indian Commissioners for official investigation, which Board, he says, notwithstanding the special law of last session of Congress, making it the duty of the Indian Commissioners to consult on all matters involving the expediture of money, were neither consulted nor notified. A thorough investigation has been promised by the President and Secretary of the Interior.

THE CATHOLICS AND THE POPE.

An Imposing Demonstration in Buffalo—Sympathy and Devotion Expressed—The Pope the Lawful King of Rome—Co-operation to Maintain His Sovereignty.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Dec. 8.—The demonstration made by the Roman Catholic citizens of this city in sympathy with Pope PIUS IX., notwithstanding the rain and muddy condition of the streets, was a most imposing affair. The route of the procession was lined with people, and the procession was one of the largest ever seen in this city. It was divided into eight divisions, each of which was headed by a band of music, preceded by a platoon of policemen. There were numerous religious societies, with banners and regalia, followed by a large number of private citizens, and a cavalcade of horsemen, which attracted great attention. Bishop RYAN opened the services at the Cathedral with a statement of the object of the demonstration, and delivered an eloquent address. Addresses were delivered in English, French and German, after which JAMES MOONEY and a committee of citizens read an address, which is to be forwarded to the Pope, and offered the following resolutions:

1. Resolved, That we here make an avowal of our most sincere homage and obedience to the See of Peter, of filial affection and spiritual allegiance and devotion to our Most Holy Father, as the legitimate successor of the Prince of the Apostles and Vicar of Christ upon earth, and sympathy at the affliction and outrage to which your august person and the Church are at present subjected.

2. Resolved, That we deprecate and condemn the lawless injustice perpetrated in the malicious and wanton invasion of your legitimate dominion, and that we solemnly denounce and condemn the sacrilegious violence, by force of arms, which has brought under captivity your sacred person.

3. Resolved, That we protest against the invasion of the liberty of the Church and the subjecting to captivity of its recognized head, both as an outrage against the sacred prerogatives of your Holiness as the Supreme Pontiff, and as a violation of the rights which we, as Catholics, possess, of being governed by a chief completely exempted from, and independent of, all civil power.

4. Resolved, That we promise to continue in faithfulness, obedience and homage to the See of St. Peter, and that we still recognize and shall continue to recognise your Holiness as the lawful King of Rome, and that we pledge our hearty co-operation to any movement of the Catholic world, that has for its object the maintenance and integrity of your sovereignty.

THRONE OF SPAIN.

The Choice of the Duke of Aosta by the Cortes—Initial Proceedings and Exciting Scenes—The Vote and Announcement.

Madrid (Nov. 17) Correspondence London Times.

At last King PRIM has completed his abdication, and succeeded in getting the Duke of AOSTA voted by the Cortes as his successor, by 191 Deputies, eighteen above the legal number required. The majority seems small at first sight, but it must be borne in mind that there was but one voting. The law provided for a second and a third in certain eventualities, but as these eventualities did not arise, the Government contented themselves with the first. From motives of personal honor and compromise, twenty-seven Deputies voted for the Duke of MONTPENSIER, one for his wife, and eight for Gen. ESPARTERO. Many of these had declared to PRIM their intention to vote for AOSTA in the second turn, after preserving their compromises in the first, so it is but fair to suppose that had the urn been again employed the 191 would have come up to over 220; 331 Deputies were present out of the 344 admitted. Of the absentees some three or four sent letters explaining the causes of their inability to be present, and expressive of their adhesion to the Government candidate, and five or six more have done so since. If, therefore, the Cortes be the faithful representation of the Spanish people, the new King is unquestionably the elected of the majority of his future subjects. It is to be hoped he will see it in that light, and not be deterred from accepting by the embittered efforts the Republicans and Carlists are making to persuade him to stay at home. Two votes were cast for Prince ALFONZO, quite a proof that the Bourbons have no sympathizers in the House; while nineteen (mostly Carlists and neo-Catholics) were unwilling to put out the name of their royal aspirant, and so voted in blank. The Republicans made a gallant but to some extent an indiscreet stand, and succeeded in polling sixty-three votes. When I say indiscreet, I do not mean in the sense of the present hopelessness of their cause, but in the sense of the unnecessarily obstructive policy they, in alliance with the Carlists, adopted at the great session of yesterday. Noisy, petulant, and even insolent, they roused the temper of President ZORRILLA, and caused him to say sharp things to them which had better have been left unsaid.

THE SESSION.

The session was exciting and painfully interesting. Only those who have lived in Spain can understand the bitterness of party spirit which has so long ruled the nation and entered into the very life-blood of the people. For two years this spirit of dissension has had its full sway, and it was but to be expected that Gen. PRIM's attempt to check it by finding a King for his countrymen should lead to a violent display of it when the critical moment arrived to vote the sovereign. Loud were the anticipations of resistance and the rumors of intended risings both in Madrid and in the provinces. By a judicious concentration of troops in the capital and in the centres of probable agitation, such as Andalusia, Catalonia and Navarre, Gen. PRIM has so far saved the country from bloodshed. In Madrid he took the most extraordinary precautions. The troops, (18,000,) with 140 pieces of artillery, have been under arms day and night, ever since the Cortes reopened, in addition to the regular guards of 12,000 volunteers. Literally speaking, Madrid is and has been one vast camp, and any attempt at insurrection would meet with an instantaneous and a bloody resistance. Yesterday the military were astir early. The Theatre of the Zarzuela and the Palace of the Duke of MEDINA CELI, which are close to the Congreso, were filled with troops. In the Retiro and Campos Eliseos the artillery was drawn up, nominally to give the salvo when the act of votation was completed, but really for more serious business if required. Mounted volunteers and mounted Civil Guards, with policemen in abundance, were in the Carrera de San Geronimo and streets contiguous to the building, while the barracks of San Martin, San Montana, &c., were ready to pour out their thousands of what CASTELAR styled 'those machines called soldiers.' These extensive military precautions were bitterly complained of by the Republican Deputies. Their 'Directory' put out a placard urging their sympatizers not to attempt the least disorder, but to trust to subsequent events for the triumph of their cause. This had an excellent effect, being signed by CASTELAR, FIGUERAS and PI MARGALL. The result was that the day passed off without any disasters to record, except the firing of a pistol at the chief of the Civil Guards in the Carrera de San Geronimo, who, by an adroit movement of his horse, avoided the ball, and it struck a poor cabby in the face, who was waiting for hire on the stand close by. Of course the people rushed and shouted, but the aggressor was not caught. A serious conspiracy to assassinate Gen. PRIM was discovered, and nine of the implicated are now in custody. It is said the Police have had scent of this conspiracy for a month.

INITIAL PROCEEDINGS.

The House and the galleries were full when the proceedings commenced. The Deputies being allowed to present petitions before the order of the day, there was quite a shoal of these against the Italian candidate, and their presenters seemed particularly desirous of creating a sensation by remarks in handing them in. In fact, the whole attitude of the Opposition seemed mischievous from the very first. Señor FIGUERAS opened the ball by presenting a petition from Leon asking the Cortes not to favor the candidate presented by the Government; also another from PENAS DE SAN PEDRO, soliciting the Cortes to declare they have no faculty to elect the King, but that he should be elected directly by the people. President ZORRILLA remarked those electors ought to have said that when they returned their Deputies to represent them. FIGUERAS retorted that the Deputies when they were canvassing did not declare their intention to elect a foreigner. Hereupon there was cheering and counter-cheering and moments of confusion, increased by the President remarking that the Deputies did not know what they would do at the time except that they would vote a Monarchy, and FIGUERAS repeating they ought to have notified their intention to vote a foreigner for King. The President said that to Señor FIGUERAS and his friends all Kings were alike. After delivering his petitions, FIGUERAS called attention to the display of military forces in the city and around the building, and asked the President whether he had taken all proper measures for the freedom of deliberation and of vote. According to his information the building was surrounded by armed forces, and Madrid was turned into a veritable camp. Even the Captain-General of New-Castile (IZQUERDO) and the Military Governor of Madrid, (PERALTA,) who always sat there in citizen dress, were today in full war uniform. The President got very excited, and smashed the bell in the effort to stop the eloquent republican, who concluded his question by asking, could there be liberty in voting with all these military precautions? Instead of admitting the precautions, and saying they were in consequence of open threats of insurrection made by some of the "men of action," of the Republican Party, the President unwisely fenced with the question, and he had not seen what FIGUERAS complained of, that to vote the King nothing was needed but the will of the Deputies, &c. This was met with cries of "No, no," and counter cries lasting some time. Then the Carlists took their innings. Señor MUZQUIZ asked the President for leave to debate on a motion he had presented. The President refused. This drove both Carlists and Republicans to their feet, demanding discussion, while the majority sustained the President, who broke a second bell before he could restore order. There came more petitions against the Duke of AOSTA, presented by Señor VILLANUEVA and Señor LUIS BLANC, both Republicans. The latter said his was from inhabitants of Medinaceli, "against the foreign citizen AMADEUS of Savoy." This produced laughter, quickly turned into uproar by his telling the President he was quite mistaken about the military forces, for, in addition to those outside the building, there was quite a camp just outside the Alcala Gate, close to the Buil Ring. Señor LORNI confirmed this, and declared that as a commander in the National Volunteers, he and his brother officers had received their orders. The President continued to ignore the fact, and this again produced commotion. No sooner was this over than Señor VINADER (Carlist) begged to state he held in his hand a communication from the Deputies Canon MANTEROLA and Señor OLOZABEL, to the effect that they could not be present at the session, as they were "in emeuration," and feared arrest the moment they put their feet on Spanish soil. These two Deputies were concerned in the recent Carlist rising. They, however, charged him to say that if they had been present they would vote against "the unpopular, humiliating and shameful policy of the Government!" Here arose terrible uproar and shouts of "Fuera! fuera!" (be off) from the Ministerial side, while the Republicans were bursting their throats with cries of "Good, good; go on!" VINADER added fuel to the fire by saying he had a petition to present from thousands of citizens asking the Cortes to reject the Duke of AOSTA because he was not a Spaniard, but the son of an excommunicated foreign King! The President stopped him, and told him that there were on the table hundreds of petitions and telegrams in favor of the Duke of AOSTA, but the Government did not think it worth while to waste the time of the Cortes by even mentioning their contents. VINADER, semi-heroically, tendered the Pope's bull of excommunication against VICTOR EMMANUEL, and demanded its reading. The House laughed him down, and the President quietly remarked he could not permit the reading of any document not relating to the election of the King of Spain. After more petitions tendered by the Republicans, one of their number, Señor MORENO RODRIGUEZ, called for the reading of the list of the 194 Deputies who, in the session of the 30th of November, 1869, voted for the re-establishment of the dynasty of the Ex-Queen. The list was read. Gen. PRIM's name was in it, and those of many others of "the Generals" who under their work in 1868. Señor ARBAZUZU demanded the reading of the list of the valiant nineteen who voted against the dynasty on that memorable occasion. It was read. It contained the names of Don NICOLAS MARIA RIVERO and of six of the present Republican leaders. Instantly some of the survivors of the 194 wished to explain their vote, but the President would not let them. GODINEZ DE PAZ declared he belonged to the Cortes of 1854, but he refrained from voting as he was a true monarchist, but could not support the Bourbon dynasty, nor could he turn Republican. Señor GASTON next demanded the reading of the article in the Constitution of 1869 which says, "The foreigner who is not naturalized cannot exercise any charge in Spain which has authority or jurisdiction." (Art. 27.) Great uproar followed this demand, but the President granted it. The clause in question was saluted with loud laughter, but the President refused to allow Señor GASTON to comment on it. Señor GARCIA LOPEZ said his friend Señor RODRIGUEZ had just told him some of the deputies had been threatened with death. Señor RODRIGUEZ confessed it was all a joke, whereupon fresh laughter broke out. President ZORRILLA then called for the order of the day, but he was interrupted by Señor QUINTERO saying there was a fictitious petition on the table, pretending to be from the Corporation of Seville, in favor of the Duke of AOSTA. He had documents to prove it false. This was the way petitions were got up and how the zeal of the Civil Governors was humbugging the Government. Some disorder followed this remark. The President told him he could see the petition in the Secretary's office. Señor CABELLO next dryly asked whether the new King would swear to the Constitution in Italian or in Spanish. Loud laughter again, turned into uproar by his begging the Cortes to suspend the election for sufficient time for Prince AMADEUS to learn Spanish, if it be true that he did not know it! The President replied that "the King would take the proper oaths in that place, and be received and respected by the country in spite of Señor GASTON and all who think like him." He then stated that two of the Carlist Deputies, Señor MUZQUIZ and Señor VINADER, had lodged motions for discussion, but as the session was a special one he had refused to allow them to be read. This was the signal for a terrible "scene." Señor FIGUERAS called it a violation of the rights of the Deputies. The President contended that the law for the election of the monarch suspended the standing rules, but, in order that the Opposition might have no complaints, he offered to consult the Chamber. The Republicans strenuously opposed his doing so, as the very act of putting such a question was contrary to the rules. The majority sided with the President. FIGUERAS accused them of wishing to stifle the cry of indignation in their throats. The confusion was perfectly indescribable. FIGUERAS, CASTELAR, PAUL Y ARGULO, VINADER, MUZQUIZ and half a dozen other Deputies all on their feet, protesting, shouting, demanding to speak, and using the most frightful gesticulations, while from the whole of the Ministerial benches came the crime of "A votar! a votar!" ("Vote! vote!") In his efforts to restore order the President broke another bell. When something like quiet was procured, the President begged the Deputies to calm their impatience, and exclaimed, "Este es el albor de la Honarquia y la desahogo de la Republica!" ("This is the dawn of the Monarchy and the defeat of the republic!") ZORRILLA is in the habit of coming out with expressions which afterward become historic. At a former session, at which I was present, and which was very stormy, he said, "Here nobody understands what he wants," a truism quite apropos to Spanish character. To return. When President ZORRILLA had finished his remarks about the albor of the Monarchy and the desahogo of the republic, the Republicans sprang to their feet, and many of them showed signs of their intention to abandon the House. PAUL Y ANGULO and others went from seat to seat persuading their companions to come out. The scene was terrible. Thanks to the remonstrances of Don MANUEL SILVELA, the Ex-Minister of State, and MORET, the present Minister of the Colonies, who rushed over from their places and talked earnestly to the excited Republicans, and especially to CASTELAR and FIGUERAS, on whom all eyes were fixed, they changed their minds and stayed. On one or two other occasions, when the entire Republican minority have retired in a pet, they have simply made themselves ridiculous to the Cortes and the country; but on this one, had they gone out and announced the cause of their exasperation to the excited multitude outside, there is no doubt there would have been bloody work. Mobs never reason. It would have been sufficient for them to see sixty or seventy Deputies apparently "turned out" to have led them to insurrection.

THE VOTE.

When the Republicans had resumed their places the question was put to the House, and decided by 178 to 2, to proceed at once to vote on the question of the monarch. The Republicans refrained from voting. Señor MUZQUIZ made a fresh attempt to speak, but the President refused and uttered the momentous words for Spain, "Let us proceed to vote the King." Solemn stillness reigned as the Secretary called each Deputy in rotation to vote. Slowly and deliberately the Deputies rose one by one, and, marching to the table, deposited a closed paper in the hands of the President, who immediately put it into the urn. Not a word was spoken until it came to Gen. IZQUIERDO's turn. Before going up to the table he exclaimed: "Up to this moment I have defended the nomination of the Duke of MONTPENSIER, but now I vote AOSTA." He wished to give his reasons, but the President refused to let him. When all had voted, the urn was unlocked, and the papers taken out and counted. There were found to be 311, exactly the number of Deputies present. The papers were then opened and read. As each Deputy was obliged to sign his paper, great interest was felt during the reading of them. At last the Secretary said: "The following is the result of the votation:"

Duke of Aosta	191	Republica Federal	60
Duke of Montpensier	27	Republica Español	2
Duchess of Montpensier	1	Republica	1
Espartero	8	Votes in blank	10
Alfonso	2
Total			311

The Secretary next said, "The number of Deputies admitted is 344. The half, plus 1, is 173. The Duke of AOSTA having obtained 191, he is beyond the majority required by law." President ZORRILLA added, "The Duke DE AOSTA is therefore elected King of Spain!" No demonstration followed the announcement. It is said that Gen. PRIM had urged his friends to give no vivas or applause, lest it should wound the feelings of the Republicans. Let us hope this is true, for, if not, it certainly looked as if the House looked with cold indifference on the result. The artillery in the Campos Eliseos fired a salve to announce the conclusion of the votation to the city.

UNITED GERMANY.

The Royal Speech at the Opening of the North German Parliament.

The speech delivered, on Nov. 24, at the opening of the North German Parliament, ran thus: "Honored gentlemen of the Parliament of the North German Confederation: His Majesty the King of Prussia has been pleased to confer upon me the task of opening the Parliament of the North German Confederation in the name of the Confederate Governments. It would have afforded His Majesty great satisfaction to be present today in your midst in order to thank God from this place for the successes with which the arms of the German forces have been blessed, and to express to you the part which the national attitude and unanimity of the Parliament, in affording the necessary means for carrying on the war, have had in these successes. By the victories, unprecedented in the military history of the world, which, by God's will have been gained through the heroic valor and sagacious leadership of the Germans, the agression undertaken by France against Germany in July last has been repelled. The French people must have accepted the conviction that its present power, since the destruction of the armies which were sent into the field against us, is not capable of coping with the united military forces of Germany. We should, therefore, be able to regard peace as certain had our unfortunate neighbors a Government the members of which regarded their future as inseparable from their country. Such a Government would have seized every opportunity to place the nation to the head of which it has raised itself by its own supreme power in a position to elect a National Assembly, and to deliberate upon the present and future of the country. But the documents which will be submitted to you, gentlemen, by the President of the Confederation, will afford you proof that those who now hold the reins of power in France prefer to sacrifice the forces of a noble nation in a hopeless struggle. The incalculable exhaustion and devastation which will be to France the consequences of a continuance of the war under the present circumstances must certainly diminish the power of the country to such an extent that its restoration will require a longer period than would be the case in the ordinary course of war. The Confederate Governments, however, are compelled with regret to give expression to their conviction that the peace between these two great neighboring peoples upon the continuance of which they calculated less than six months ago, will but be all the more in danger by the remembrance which the impression of this war will leave in France the moment when France, by the restoration of her own strength, or by the conclusion of alliances with other Powers, shall feel herself strong enough to recommence the struggle. The conditions upon which the allied Governments would be ready to conclude peace have been publicly discussed. It is necessary that they should be commensurate with the greatness of the sacrifices laid upon the country by the war, which, though undertaken by France without any ground whatsoever, had the assent of the whole French nation. It is above all things necessary that they should establish a defensible frontier for Germany against the continuance by future Governments of France of the policy of conquest which had been pursued for so many hundred years, and that this frontier should be settled in such a way as partly to redress the results of the unfortunate wars which Germany, at a period of internal division, was compelled to wage by the will of France. At the same time it is necessary that our South German brethren should be freed from the threatening position which their fraternal love for Germany has given it. The Confederate Governments feel that they can rely upon the North German Parliament to refuse the means which are required for the attainment of those objects. They are convinced that now, when it is a question of rendering secure the results which have been achieved, they will meet in you the same patriotism and devotion which they found when the task was that of accomplishing the now-achieved successes. It is their most profound wish that it may be possible to refrain from using the whole of these means. In order to afford you a complete survey of the political situation, the Government will lay before you the communications which have recently reached it from the Ministry for Foreign Affairs respecting the Treaty of Paris of the 30th of March, 1856, in doing which the Confederate Governments desire to express their hope that the blessings of peace will remain assured to those nations which have hitherto enjoyed them. The continuance of the war has not prevented the accomplishment of a work of peace. The sentiment of unity which has been vivified by the common danger and the jointly-won victories, the consciousness of the position which Germany, for the first time for centuries, has achieved through her unity, the recognition of the fact that only by the creation of permanent institutions for the future of Germany can a fitting legacy of this time of deeds and sacrifices be assured have more rapidly and universally than a short time back would have been credible the conviction that a stronger link than that afforded by international treaties is needed between the North and the South. This unanimous opinion of the Governments has led to negotiations, the first fruit of which, grown on the field of battle, will be laid before you for approval in the shape of a constitution for a German Confederacy, which has been agreed upon by the North German Confederation and the Grand Duchies of Baden and Hesse-Darmstadt, and which has been unanimously adopted by the Federal Council. The understanding which has been arrived at upon similar bases with Bavaria will also form the subject of your deliberations, and the agreement of views between the allied Governments and Wurtemberg respecting the object to be aimed at permits us to hope that a similar agreement as to the method of attaining it will not be wanting. Honored gentlemen, with this work you will worthily close a period of activity such as has rarely been the lot of Legislative Assemblies."

ADMIRALTY PRACTICE

Important Decision by Judge Woodruff—Question as to the Proper Time for Taking an Appeal—An Execution Set Aside as Irregular.

Judge WOODRUFF rendered an important decision yesterday in an Admiralty cause entitled, GEORGE HARRIS et al. vs. SAMUEL G. WHEELER, regarding the question whether execution can issue in an appellate case before an "award of a recovery" has been made by this Court. A motion was made by counsel for the defendant to set aside the execution, on the ground that it was not regular, as it was issued upon an "order of affirmance," and that the defendant was entitled to ten days after a judgment in form had been entered in favor of the libelants. The defendant, after more than ten days had elapsed from the time of granting the order of affirmance, appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States, at the same time furnishing a bond sufficient to operate as a stay of proceedings. The libelants claimed that an order of affirmance was the final judgment, according to the act of Congress limiting the time within which appeals may be taken. Judge WOODRUFF decided that the execution was not proper, but mentioned that he would leave the security in such a case to cover the whole judgment, damage and costs, as well as costs in error. (Catlett vs. Bodice, 9 Wheat. 553; Stafford vs. Union Bank, 16 How 135.) This inference is plausible, at least, that until some actual award of damages or costs to a definite amount the party appealing does not know, and the Judge taking the security does not know, what should be the amount of the bond, nor in what amount the sureties should justify. And that no judgment can be said to be rendered, and more especially no decree in admiralty, can be said to be passed until some actual award of recovery by the libelant is made. The question here, as above suggested, is not whether the appeal which has been taken is regular, but whether the defendant in it was not taken within ten days from the entry of the order appealed from, and cannot for that reason operate as a supersedeas or stay of execution, if that order be deemed a decree passed within the act. (The Roanoke, 3 Blatch. 350.) If it was not ripe for an appeal, then such appeal would be dismissed, and it necessarily follows that it can have no influence on the present motion; that is to say, if it was premature and void for the Supreme Court, then it cannot stay the libelant's proceedings. If it was not premature, but will operate to give the Supreme Court jurisdiction, still, it not being taken within ten days after the order appealed from, it cannot stay execution unless the bond on appeal is given and may be taken before the ten days begin to run, within which it must be taken. In view of the decision in SHABEE vs. FOOT, above referred to, I prefer to leave to the Supreme Court to say whether the ten days begin to run so soon as the libelant arrives when an appeal may be taken. And whether if the defendant waits until the actual entry of a decree which settles definitely all the details, his appeal, if taken within ten days thereafter, will stay execution.

Here an execution has been issued when there is no judgment or decree awarding to the libelant a recovery, nor awarding to him any execution or other means of giving effect to the decision of the Court.

I am informed that it has been usual in this Circuit to issue execution in cases in Admiralty, when no other judgment than an order of affirmance has been made or entered, the proctor for that purpose taking the amount of damages to be collected from the decree in the District Court and the costs of appeal from the taxation by the Clerk. I think such a practice both loose and irregular, and I am not aware of any like practice anywhere.

Even if an appeal to this Court in a cause in Admiralty were a mere appeal on which the proceedings below were reviewed, and nothing more, no execution should issue out of this Court without an award of a recovery. In the State Courts, when a cause was removed by writ of error, and the judgment of affirmance was rendered with a remand of the record, a judgment was necessary to enable the prevailing party to issue execution for the costs in error.

But here a cause in Admiralty is removed into this Court for a new trial, and the proceedings here are of a mixed nature. The question is not limited to the inquiry whether the District Court decided the case correctly on the merits, but whether upon the case, as made in this Court, the libelant is entitled to recover, and if so, how much. As to certain questions, the parties will be concluded if the questions have not been raised in the Court below; but, properly speaking, the inquiry here is not a question of affirmance or reversal, but a question of right to a decree upon the trial in this Court. When no new proofs are presented in this Court, and the conclusion is that the decree below was the proper decree upon the proofs, it has become usual to express that conclusion by calling it an "affirmance," but I regard that as technically inaccurate. The proper decree here is that the libelant recover, &c., or that the libel be dismissed, and that the claimant recover his costs, (when costs are awarded.) And no execution should issue until some award of a recovery in this Court has been made. In ordinary cases at law, no execution could be issued without such an award, and although judgment will become final after four days in term, that alone did not warrant the issuing of an execution.

The execution herein must be set aside.

C. DONAHUE for the libelants; L. B. BUNNELL for the defendants.

There are already six tickets in the field for municipal officers in Boston. There are, however, thus far, only three candidates for Mayor—WM. GASTON, who is supported by the Democrats, independent citizens, and independent and young Democrats; GEORGE O. CARPENTER, whose name is on the Republican and the Faneuil Hall Citizens' tickets, and ALONZO A. KNIGHT, the candidate of the labor reformers. The names of SAMUEL LITTLE and HENRY L. PIERCE are on all the tickets for Aldermen (except the labor reform.

BENEATH SHELLS IN PARIS.

Proclamation by Trochu—A Captured Balloon—The American Ambulance—The "Cannon Furor"—Rochefort—Photographic Postal System.

From Our Special Correspondent.

PARIS, Monday, Nov. 14, 1870.

A proclamation from Gen. TROCHU marks to-day in the history of the siege; this document plainly indicates active operations within a short period and is intended without doubt to cut short all comments upon the possibility of an armistice, which continue to prevail, notwithstanding the direct assertion by the Government in yesterday morning's Officiel that all the rumors of the resumption of negotiations are absolutely without foundation. As I said before these reports are always spread abroad by partisans of monarchy and form a part of their battery against the republic. Upon reading the articles extracted from sundry copies of a New-York paper, which have been reproduced in extenso by nearly all the Paris papers, I am not at all surprised at that journal having reached us to the exclusion of others of the New-York Press. The tone of the correspondent is unmistakably favorable to the Prussians, and BISMARCK took pleasure, there can be no doubt, in forwarding as large a number as possible of a journal printed and published in Republican America in which the word "canaille," is applied to the partisans of the Republican cause in France. The obvious intention is to awaken a distrust in the sentiments of friendship expressed by the United States; and if Paris had not made an immense progress in humanity since the days of the "poissardes" of the first French Revolution, this correspondent might find himself responsible for scenes of violence in which his own countrymen and countrywomen would be the victims. The feeling of the ignorant classes against foreigners of all nations, owing to the state of isolation to which Paris has been reduced, after having reigned triumphant as the caravanseral of the world, does not need encouraging, and there was a time when it was a question whether even Americans would not do better to leave the city. This feeling was but momentary, but there is no necessity for calling it up again.

CAPTURED BALLOON.

A Government carrier-pigeon arrived night before last, with a dispatch, dated Vendome, and signed by M. BOZE, of the balloon Chateaudun, which sailed on the 6th. All Paris was affected by the intelligence conveyed by this aerial messenger that the Galileo had been taken by the Prussians. It left on the 4th, and in addition to the sailor aeronaut, had one passenger, on a Government mission—M. ETIENNE ANTONEN. The Galileo took flight on Friday, so that its sailor Captain must be still more confirmed in his superstition against that unlucky day of the week.

THE AMERICAN AMBULANCE.

Gen. DUCROT, accompanied by a brilliant staff, made a visit to the American ambulance yesterday afternoon. The General was received by Mr. WASHBURNE and by Rev. Mr. LAMSON, Drs. SWINBURNE and JOHNSTON. He expressed himself greatly pleased with the admirable arrangements of the ambulance. Nearly all the wounded are convalescent. The amputated patients are all doing admirably. The General took occasion to congratulate them and the surgeons who had been so successful in their treatment. Some of the officers of the staff said that a sortie was fixed for Wednesday next, rather an indiscretion on their part; but the Prussians are so vigilant that there is little doubt but that they are informed of what is going on in Paris just a little ahead of time, like the telegraph from New-York to San Francisco.

THE "CANNON FUROR."

The cannon "furor" still prevails. PASDELOUP, the famous "Sunday classic concert" director, gave his receipts yesterday for the founding of a cannon, to be named the Beethoven. The programme was composed of pieces selected from the works of MEYERBEER, MENDELSSOHN, and BEETHOVEN himself, who was a Republican of his day, and who changed the name of one of his symphonies, composed in honor of the First Consul, when NAPOLEON seized the Imperial sceptre. M. LEGOUVE, in his lectures on the "Moral Alimentation during the Siege," insists upon the re-opening of the theatres and musical halls. It is likely that his preaching will not fall upon unheedful ears. The Grand Opera gives two concerts in each week. The diminution in the number of gas-lights is a real drawback, however, to public amusement. The chiaro-oscuro is not calculated to rouse the spirits; nothing can be more depressing, on the contrary, than the aspect of the former days' highly-lighted halls in their present sombre, shadowy tinting.

ROCHEFORT.

HENRI ROCHEFORT finds himself sadly isolated since his break with the Government of National Defense and the imprisonment of his friend FLOURENS. ROCHEFORT's physique does not fit him for the rôle of conspirator. He was seized with a fainting-fit on the famous 31st of October, and had to be borne away, just as he was at the funeral of VICTOR NOIR. Since, ROCHEFORT wanders like an uneasy ghost; he is frequently seen solitary and alone, moving slowly along the Boulevards. It is announced today that he intends to resume the publication of his Lanterne. Another rumor is that he has entered the artillery of the Seine as a gunner. He had better stick to his "last,"—ne sutor ultra crepidam; he is a keen, spicy writer, but no actor in stirring scenes.

PHOTOGRAPHIC POSTAL SYSTEM.

Two magnificent Godard balloons, the Niepce and the Daguerre, started yesterday morning from the Orleans Railway Station. The Niepce conveyed as passengers M. DAGRON and three assistants, with a complete apparatus for establishing the photographic postal system in the Provinces. Admirals CHALLIE, HEVINOT DE L'ANGLE, M. RAMPONT and a number of invited guests were present at the departure. The weather was fine, and the balloons took the direction of east north-east.

A First Decided Success—The Food Supply—About Balloons—New Mayor.

From Our Special Correspondent.

PARIS, Tuesday, Nov. 15, 1870.

Paris is immensely elated this morning; its first decided success is announced. Let me borrow from the Officiel. This is the exordium:

"TO THE INHABITANTS AND DEFENDERS OF PARIS: My dear fellow-citizens—It is with unspeakable joy that I bring to you the good news you are about to read. Thanks to the valor of our soldiers, fortune is returning to us. Your courage will keep it with us. We are about to stretch forth our hands to our brothers of the Departments, and with them deliver the soil of our country. 'Vive la Republique!' 'Vive la France!'" Signed JULES FAVRE, Minister of the Interior ad interim.

Here is the good news, brought by the pigeon dispatch:

"GAMBETTA TO TROCHU: The Army of the Loire, under the command of Gen. DE AURELLES DE PALLADINES, took possession of Orleans, yesterday, after a combat which lasted two days. Our losses in killed and wounded do not reach two thousand men; those of the enemy are much greater. We have taken a thousand prisoners, and the number is being augmented in the pursuit. We have taken two cannons of the Prussian model, twenty-six caissons of munitions, and great quantities of wagons and provisions. The principal action was concentrated around Coulomnieres on the 9th. The spirit of our troops was remarkable in spite of the bad weather. Tours, Nov. 11, 1870."

This intelligence has come most opportunely, and its good effect is heightened by the simultaneous arrival of a pigeon postal dispatch containing replies to balloon letters to more than a thousand Parisian families. The review of the Mobiles and National Guard now going on in the Champs Elysees has just been reported to me as most animated, and one of my "provision" dealers has just come, after a long attack of illness, to say that he expects to receive a supply of butter by the Orleans Railroad within a week. The cheapest butter costs today three dollars a pound—the best six. There are pessimist alarms, notwithstanding. "They say"—that terrible irresponsible impersonality—that the above dispatch was sent in by the Prussians to entice TROCHU to his ruin. This is simply absurd, but it shows the secret working of the opposition party—the Monarchists and disappointed Imperialists.

THE FOOD SUPPLY.

It is also rumored, with what ground I cannot state, that the Daguerre balloon has also fallen into the hands of the Prussians, near the former head-quarters of the King, Ferrieres, the chateau of Baron ROTHSCHILD. We are assured this morning that there is not the slightest danger of the failure of the supply of horse-meat, not less than 90,000 horses fit for the butcher's knife still remaining. The requisition of the horned cattle by the Government resulted in the delivery of 3,000 cows into its hands, thus prolonging one resource at least six days, with the present rations. One of the morning papers states seriously that a Commissary left Paris in one of the last balloons—we hope not the Daguerre—with a contract for bringing in beeves within a fortnight. We shall see. In the meantime we, the besieged, are not only seeing the elephant, but some of us have eaten him. Nearly all the animals of the Jardin des Plantes have been mercilessly butchered—the carnivorous excepted, of course; but we are not sure that we may not come to that. Rats, cats and dogs are recognized as a part of our daily alimentation. Openly has a horse-butcher in the Rue Rochechouart added the whole tribe of domestic animals—rats in the bargain—to his list of aliments. "Chevaline, Canine, and Feline Meat-shop" is his sign.

ABOUT BALLOONS.

The news of the capture of the Daguerre is regarded as certain. Five pigeons have returned, with the same information. A bag of important dispatches was saved, but no details of the manner of the wreck are given. The pigeon that brought the dispatch of happy augury had one wing covered with blood, doubtless from a shot fired by the Prussians. The Lyons Railway Station is now taken up as a balloon-factory. A monster balloon is in course of fabrication. Fifteen passengers will leave Paris in its basket. M. DUPUY DE LORNE has purchased an immense quantity of white silk and white gaze de chambery for his balloon, intended to go to the Provinces and return, according to his system presented to the Academy of Sciences and approved. The Government granted $8,000 for the experiment.

NEW MAYOR.

The election of the Mayor of Paris is under consideration, now that universal suffrage has succeeded so well in the choice of the Mayors of the twenty arrondissements. It is probable that these minor functionaries, with their adjuncts, will be intrusted with the power of voting for their head.

OBITUARY.

Death of a Venerable Physician.

Dr. PLATT WILLIAMS, who died yesterday at the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. G. C. WETMORE, in Eleventh-street, at the advanced age of eighty-six, was a native of Huntington, L. I. He commenced the practice of his profession in Albany more than sixty years ago, where he soon established a reputation for medical skill, personal integrity and social worth, qualities which grew stronger and brighter with every succeeding year. During the War of 1812, while Greenbush was a United States Army cantonment, Dr. WILLIAMS was its post surgeon.

Dr. WILLIAMS' patients became his friends and remained such through life. As a physician he was distinguished for practical good sense, a quality which he made available in all emergencies. Though a thoroughly educated physician, who kept up his medical reading, he did not reject outside remedies, the virtues of which had been tested, or which commended themselves to his reason and judgment. He believed that the vegetable kingdom contained remedies for many of "the ills flesh is heir to." In this respect, if he had a professional prejudice, it was in favor of "stramonium" as an alleviator. Dr. WILLIAMS was the last of a class of physicians who were distinguished at Albany during the first half of the present century, among whom were Drs. LOW, BAY, WENDALL, EIGHTS, WING and YATES. This class was succeeded by another equally distinguished, consisting of Drs. MCNAUGHTON, MARCH, HUN, BOYD, COGGSWELL, STEARNS, ARMSBY, &c., and these by a third class, who are rising to eminence and usefulness, consisting of Drs. VANDERPOEL, QUACKENBOSS, &c.

The remains of Dr. WILLIAMS will be taken to Albany for interment.

DEPARTMENT OF DOCKS.

Bills Audited—Dredging the Slips—Powers and Duties of the Department.

The regular weekly meeting of the Commissioners of Docks was held yesterday afternoon, President JOHN T. ANNEW in the chair, and Messrs. HUNT, HENRY SMITH and WOOD present.

The following bills, having been audited by the Finance Committee, were ordered to be paid: For a pile-driving machine, $764 50; for a supply of plank spikes, $1,655 23; for tools, $1,226 60; for lumber, $15,653 98; total, $19,691 51.

The Executive Committee reported in favor of repairing Piers Nos. 51 and 53, East River, at a cost not to exceed $7,500, on condition that the owners or lessees assume one-half the expense. Also that proceedings in reference to repairing Pier No. 43, East River, should be suspended. These reports were adopted.

Considerable time was occupied in a discussion concerning the proposition to regulate the tax imposed upon the use of horses upon the piers to discharge or load cargo. Commissioner HENRY explained that when the owners or lessees of private or public piers laid down planking as a pathway for draught horses thus employed, there was a difficulty in collecting the payment from the owners of the animals. It was proposed in case the pier-owners or lessees so plank the pier that they may collect $1 per day for each horse thus employed, but when the stevedores lay the planks no charge shall be collected. It was finally decided that the Department shall provide all such planking, and collect $1 per day from the stevedores for every horse used. The Committee recommended that copies of the law be posted up in conspicuous places on the piers. The Secretary was directed to notify Messrs. SPOFFORD, TILESTON & Co, to remove the carpenter and blacksmith shop from Pier No. 4 North River.

Upon the report of the Executive Committee, the Board suspended all action in the matter of erecting a platform at the foot of Sixty-second-street, North River, in order to afford the lessees an opportunity to represent their objections.

A communication from the Board of Health was presented by Mr. HASWELL, one of its officers, who also addressed the Commissioners upon the subject involved. The Board of Health requested that the slips between Piers Nos. 38 and 41 North River be properly dredged. At low tide large masses of putrescence are exposed to the air, and exude the most offensive and dangerous odors, highly disagreeable and detrimental to the health of the neighborhood. He was requested to ascertain from the Commissioners how far their authority extended over private slips, and what control they had over the public docks and adjoining waters. He said that the Board of Health were convinced that all the slips should be dredged and kept clean, not only as a beneficial measure in a commercial point of view, but as a necessary safeguard against malarial odors and consequent disease. He also wished to know how far the Dock Department were willing to advance in these dredging operations; and stated that in the event of the Commissioners' unwillingness or neglect to act in the premises, the Board of Health would assume the responsibility of executing the work and assessing the expense of the same upon the owners or lessees involved.

Mr. AGNEW thought the Commissioners had control over all the slips, public and private.

The Secretary furnished a copy of the laws pertaining to the jurisdiction and powers of the Department, which are as follows:

Section 32, of chapter 383, laws of 1870.—The Department of Docks in the City of New-York shall have exclusive charge and control, subject, in the particulars hereinafter mentioned, to the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund of said City, of all the wharf property belonging to the City of New-York, including all the wharves, piers, bulkheads and structures thereon, and waters adjacent thereto, and all the slips, basins, docks, water-fronts, land under water, and structures thereon, and the appurtenances, easements, uses, reversions and rights, belonging thereto, which are now owned or possessed by the same Corporation, or to which said Corporation is, or may become entitled, or which said Corporation may acquire under the provisions hereof, or otherwise; and said Department shall have exclusive control of the repairing, building, rebuilding, maintaining, altering, strengthening, leasing and protecting said property, and every part thereof, and of all the cleaning, dredging and deepening necessary in and about the same. Said Department is also hereby invested with the exclusive government and regulation of all wharves, piers, bulkheads and structures thereon, and waters adjacent thereto, and all the basins, slips and docks, with the land under water in said City, not owned by said Corporation. The duties and powers heretofore performed and exercised by any officer, department or bureau, of the said Corporation in and about all, or any part of the said property, are hereby transferred to and vested exclusively in the said Department, but this provision shall not effect the powers of the aforesaid Commissioners of the Sinking Fund.

Messrs. AGNEW and HENRY replied successively. They wished to know if it was proper that the New-York Rendering Company should be suffered to dump their offal and refuse matter into the slips? Did the Board of Health countenance that?

Mr. HASWELL promptly responded that his Board disapproved and condemned such dumping as a most foul wrong.

NOTES FROM THE PEOPLE.

The City Chamberlain.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I have read with much interest the articles you have recently published in relation to the management of the City finances and the unwarranted indorsement of the same by certain prominent citizens. While it would be very hard to make one believe that Messrs. ASTOR, TAYLOR, ROBERTS and others were influenced by corrupt motives in signing the abstract of the City debt, &c., which has been published, still I cannot subscribe to the conclusion they came to, "that the financial affairs of the City, under the charge of the Controller, are administered in a correct and faithful manner."

Without occupying space now to detail the reasons which lead me to doubt the integrity of the present administration, I wish to make a suggestion, which I think is worthy of consideration. Under the present law, the sinking funds of the corporation, of which there are two, are intrusted to the management of a Commission composed of the following City officials, viz., the Mayor, Controller, Recorder, Chamberlain, Chairman of the Finance Committee of the Board of Aldermen, and the Chairman of the Finance Committee of the Board of Assistant Aldermen. What I wish to propose is, that the City Chamberlain shall be excused from service as a member of that Commission. As long as that officer shall be able to use the public moneys for his own benefit, as at present, it will always be to his interest to keep as large an amount on hand as he can. Instead of keeping the moneys belonging to the sinking funds invested and yielding interest to the City, it will be to his interest, as well as his practice, as far as he may be able, to postpone investments by the Commissioners, and meanwhile use the money for his own advantage.

I, therefore, think that the Chamberlain should be relieved from further service or responsibility as a member of the Sinking Fund Commission.

I approve of, and thank you for the suggestion you made a few days since, that the twenty odd million dollars of securities, besides the additional million or more of unemployed money in the City Treasury, now belonging to the sinking funds, be applied at once to the discharge of an equal amount of the funded City debt. I think those securities and cash are very nearly sufficient to pay off all of the Croton Water, Central Park and other loans payable from the sinking fund. Those debts once wiped out, the flood of revenues derived from the water rents and other sources, now flowing into the sinking fund, may be applied to lessen the amount of annual taxation to which we are now subject.

The Deaf and Dumb Institution.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Will you be good enough to make the following statement in reference to the actual condition of things at the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb at One Hundred and Sixty-second-street: The prevalence and results of the typhoid fever here have been greatly exaggerated in some of the daily papers. The typhoid fever was brought to the Institution by a boy from Wayne County in this State, whose brother had died of the disease. Since the 19th of October there have been fifty-six cases of typhoid fever, and five of these have proved fatal. The cases have all been removed to a separate hospital. There are now but thirty-two on the sick list and in fair way to recover. The insufficient supply of water, which aggravated the disease, has been remedied by the aid of the Croton Water Department, a sewer to low water mark in the Hudson River is in process of construction, and every suggestion of the Board of Health has already been anticipated by the action of the Executive Committee of the Board of Directors.

Truly yours,

ISAAC LEWIS PEET, Principal.

Shakespeare's Boot-Black.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Will Miss K. FIELD inform us of her authority for stating, in her lecture on DICKENS, that THACKERAY once said or wrote that "He wished he had been SHAKESPEARE'S boot-black!" Miss FIELD may say what she pleases about the great caricaturist, but she ought to spare the great humorist.

Generous Tweed!

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The Commercial Advertiser (subsidized) calls W. M. TWEED "noble and generous" for assisting a poor family, or promising to do so, because he "knew the father in better days." Now if he wishes for more objects of charity, who have been better days, let him look up his old creditors whom he shuffled off by the two-thirds Insolvent act. They will be very glad to receive the principal of his indebtedness. Let him be just as well as generous.

CONSISTENCY.

A VERY PRETTY QUARREL

Serious Breach Between the Supervisors and Mayor Hall—A Dead-Lock in the Affairs of the County.

The singular action of Mayor HALL at the meeting of the Supervisors last Tuesday on the occasion of the presentation of several resolutions, among which was one to reimburse Counselor W. F. HOWE for professional services rendered in defending JACK REYNOLDS, the murderer, in assuming the right to nullify acts of the Board not in accordance with his own views, and his statement that he was acting under a law passed by the Legislature in April last, has occasioned considerable excitement around the new Court-house, in connection with the palpable fact that the Court-house Commissioners are working tooth and nail against the interests of all jobs in which there is the least suspicion that the Mayor has any interest. The law under which Mr. HALL claims his power is contained in section 8 of chapter 196, the act relating to the Supervisors, and reads as follows: "The concurrence of a majority of all the members of the Board of Supervisors, and including the Mayor's vote thereupon when he shall be present, shall always be necessary to the passage of any resolution, ordinance or act."

A curious circumstance connected with the affair is that Supervisor PLUNKITT, while in the Assembly last Winter, was Chairman of the Committee having charge of the engrossing of the laws, and knew nothing of the matter until the Mayor called the attention of the Board to it last Tuesday. In regard to the statement of the Mayor that the Board had no right to appropriate money for lawyers' fees for defending prisoners, even when assigned to such duty by the Judges, he neglected to mention that in December, 1865, in a fight in a saloon, at the corner of Broome and Marion streets, PATRICK DWYER murdered PATRICK MCCUDDEN, and Messrs. BROWN, HALL & VANDERPOOL—Mayor HALL being a member of the firm—defended the prisoner, for which they received $6,500; the money being appropriated by the Board of Supervisors.

The members of the Board have had several caucuses to ascertain if they cannot form some plan to checkmate the Mayor, many of them affirming that they will not attend any more sessions until something is done to render them a more independent body. As it stands now the affairs of the county are in a sort of "dead-lock," and unless some amicable arrangement can be made, those having claims against the county will have to wait. Already numbers of well-known contractors for county supplies are seen around the Court-house corridors and the Supervisors' office endeavoring to patch up a truce.

The Court-house Commissioners have done nothing lately, or at least they vouchsafe nothing to the Press after their secret meetings. The Court attendants still hold on to their places notwithstanding their dismissal by the Commissioners. In one part of the Supreme Court, yesterday, no less than six door-keepers were on hand.

Kings County Superintendents of the Poor—Employes Discharged.

The Kings County Board of Superintendents of the Poor met, yesterday, at Flatbush, and adopted the following report of Superintendent FORAN, for the reduction of the expenses of the Department:

GENTLEMEN: Your Committee appointed at a previous meeting to take into consideration the necessity of a reduction of the expenses of the different departments, beg leave to report that they have given the matter their earnest attention for the last week, and from an examination of the departmentments under our control we are now satisfied that some of the employes can be dispensed with. We beg leave to offer the following:

Resolved, That the Clerk be directed to notify the following employes of the Almshouse that their services are no longer required: Bernard Tierney, teamster; Michael Grace, assistant blacksmith; William F. Walsh, assistant gardener; Henry Webb, assistant gate-keeper; Henry Gross, assistant. That the following persons be discharged from the Hospital, dating from Dec. 7: Richard Malone, gardener; Lewis Morganstein, assistant in laboratory; ——, carpenter. From the Asylum: Wm. Conner, painter; John Heniker, mason; Thomas Tracy, teamster; ——, carpenter. From the Nursery: Catherine L. Phillips, Patrick McCabe, gardener; Daniel Marnell, carpenter. And that the wages of the following-named employes should be reduced as named below: George Verity, farmer, from $600 to $600 per year; J. P. Cooper, gate-keeper, $3 per day to $600 a year; John Swisser, cook, from $50 per month to $30; Wm. Hannah, from $30 per month to $25; George Fitzpatrick, from $700 per year to $25 per month. Respectfully submitted.

The report was adopted and an additional resolution passed reducing the salaries of four o. the engineers from $3 to $2 50 a day. In view of the show of economy it may be noted that while there are but one-third the number of paupers in this county that there are in New-York, it takes $600,000 per annum to keep them—a sum nearly as great as that spent in New-York.

The latter has applied for a mandamus to compel its opening, and thus the matter stands at present.

The mania for murdering old men without cause, has extended to the Pacific States. On the 23d of November two soldiers of Company C, Second United States Artillery, stationed at Fort Stevens, Oregon, went out for a walk and got drunk. "In their rambling," says the Oregonian, "they met an old man of about sixty years, named HARRINGTON, a carpenter, well known in Astoria. One of them, a Spaniard named RODRIGUEZ, without the least provocation, knocked the old man down, and the other, whose name is NOLAN, jumped upon him, seized him by the throat, and, taking a large knife from his pocket, deliberately drew its edge across the old man's throat, cutting a horrible gash almost from ear to ear, severing an artery and laying the windpipe bare."

A case of considerable interest to bankrupts and others was lately tried in the United States Circuit Court for the Western District of Pennsylvania. The suit was brought by the assignee of one WILLIAM BURNS against the First National Bank of Clarion. It seems that BURNS had come to an understanding with his Pittsburg creditors, by which he was to receive an extension of time in meeting his obligations to them, provided his other creditors were satisfied to do likewise. It was particularly stipulated that he was not to confess any judgments to the Clarion Bank, but notwithstanding this he gave the bank a judgment note and was shortly after declared a bankrupt on his own petition. The bank had realized on its note, and the action was brought for the purpose of recovering the value of the property seized to satisfy the same. The jury found for the plaintiff with costs.

The Troubles of an Author.

At the Jefferson Market Police Court, yesterday afternoon, MARKINFIELD ADDEY, of No. 235 West Thirty-eighth-street, charged A. A. W. MULHERN, of No. 149 North Eighth-street, Brooklyn, with stealing a manuscript copy of a work entitled "Eminent Living Americans," the prospectus of which has already been published. It appeared that about twelve months since Mr. ADDEY employed the defendant at a salary as a copyist, and, on the 2d of November last, gave him the manuscript of his work to take to the publishing office of HARPER BROTHERS, in this City. MULHERN failed to execute his trust, and retained the property in his possession, alleging, as an excuse, that he had not been paid for his services. The work embraced biographies of eminent American statesmen of the present, and its value was estimated at over $1,000. MULHERN stated that the greater part of the manuscript was in his handwriting, and he kept it merely to insure compensation. Judge FOWLER adjourned the investigation of the case to next Tuesday.

The Publication of the Official Records of Marriages and Births Prohibited.

The publication by a portion of the daily Press of the returns of marriages, births and deaths, made daily to the Board of Health, has called forth a storm of remonstrance from many of the parties interested. Many persons who were married privately, and desired that the fact should be kept secret for a time at least, found their names, ages, residences, and date of marriage blazoned forth to the world. Relatives, in several instances, were first made aware of the shame of an unmarried kinswoman by reading that she had given birth to an infant. The disgrace of the daughter of a wealthy up-town merchant was made public in this manner only a day or two ago. For these reasons President BOOWORTH, of the Board of Health, has deemed it advisable to prohibit the publication of the daily returns of marriages and births, and the specific cause of death.

Judge Loew as a Parson—The Lawyers Outflanked—A Suit for Breach of Promise Settled by Marriage.

In the case of WILHELMINA ERNST vs. CLEMENS HERDER, for breach of promise to marry, a motion was noticed for yesterday morning, in the Court of Common Pleas, before Judge LOEW, to place the cause on the short calendar. Before the hour appointed, however, and while the lawyers were assembling on both sides, the parties to the action quietly made known to the clerk of the Court their desire to enter a discontinuance in the action in the form of a marriage ceremony. Judge LOEW having arrived, his services were invoked, and the whole party retiring to a side room, with the necessary witnesses and a few of the Court officials, Judge LOEW, according to the usual legal formula, made the litigants husband and wife. After congratulations all round, the now reconciled parties left the Court, having knocked the standing in Court clean from under their expectant lawyers. The fair bride was born in Bremen, and is now a resident of Flushing, L. I., while the conquered groom is a native of Hanover, a widower, and now resides at Newport, Ky.

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT.

No. 2—William S. Ward, Executor, vs. The United States.—Appeal from the Court of Claims.—Nahum Ward, the testator, in his life-time filed a petition in the Court of Claims, as originally organized, to recover judgment on forty-three "loan office certificates" of the United States, for $400 each, with interest thereon at six per cent. from the year of their issue, 1777. In February, 1857, judgment was rendered in his favor for $60,876 99, and reported to Congress. Pending the action of Congress thereon, Ward died. In July 1864, the matter was referred back to the Court of Claims, when in March 1866 the petition was dismissed, the Court finding that the certificates had not been duly countersigned by a Commissioner for the State of Georgia, to which State they were issued and charged, as required by law, and that the indorsement they presented was not shown to be authorized. Some of the certificates having had interest paid on them, the Court held that that fact did not raise a legal presumption that the person indorsing them had been recognized as a Commissioner for the State to countersign them.

The appellant contends that the certificates were issued in pursuance of law, and that the State of Georgia, in the settlement of her accounts with the United States, was charged with, and has paid them. It is also insisted that the payment of interest by the Government is an act of ratification which now estops it from denying the validity of the certificates. The Attorney-General relies on the objection raised in the Court of Claims, and urges further that as these certificates are a portion of the national debt, the Court of Claims has no jurisdiction of a claim involving them. The Government, it is said, has not authorized such an action, based upon its securities.

Thomas Ewing, Jr., for appellant; Attorney-General A. T. Akerman for the Government.

SUPERIOR COURT—TRIAL TERM—PART I.—DEC. 8.

Before Judge Freedman and a Jury.

A CHILD FALLS INTO AN AREA.

James McLain vs. Thomas Van Zant.—The plaintiff brings his action to recover $20,000 damages for injuries sustained by his daughter, aged five years, in having fallen into an unprotected area in front of his house, No. 24 East Twelfth-street.

The defendant admitted the ownership of the house, but denied all other allegations in the complaint. The evidence on the behalf of plaintiff went to show that the little girl, who lives in the adjoining house, on the 29th of November, 1865, while hastening to enter her father's house, stumbled and fell head foremost to the bottom of the area, breaking her skull and otherwise greatly injuring her head and face, and injuring her whole body so much that her life was then despaired of; that the consequences remain to this day in the form of great pain and frequent fits attended with convulsions, unconsciousness and delirium, and that her mind as well as her body are incurably injured and impaired. The evidence of the plaintiff being in, defendant's counsel moved to dismiss the complaint on the ground that the father knew of this unprotected area, and that having such knowledge, he was guilty of contributive negligence in permitting so young a child (then but three years and a half old) to run in the street unprotected. The Court granted the motion, and dismissed the complaint.

A. K. Hadley for plaintiff; Cowles and Lake for defendant.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM—DEC. 8.

Before Judge Brady.

ALLEGED USURY IN THE SALE OF REAL ESTATE.

George Kuhn vs. Charles N. Alcott.—It appears that the plaintiff sold to the defendant certain real estate in this City for $40,000, taking a bond and mortgage for $20,000 for part of the purchase-money. The agreement was that the mortgagee should sell this bond and mortgage at a discount of ten per cent., ($2,000,) and that the mortgagor should make good the discount. The suit was brought to recover the $2,000. The defendant demurred to the complaint on the ground that the contract was usurious in its inception. The Court sustained the demurrer and rendered judgment for the defendant.

COMMON PLEAS—TRIAL TERM—PART II.—DEC. 8.

Before Judge Larremore and a Jury.

A DISASTROUS VISIT—AN UNSAFE PIAZZA.

Ann Morehead vs. Peter H. Moss.—The defendant is the owner of premises No. 482 Seventh-avenue, of which plaintiff's mother is a tenant and lessee. On the rear of the premises, attached to and on a level with the second floor occupied by plaintiff's mother, was a piazza, which was used as a part of such second floor. On the 28th of October, 1868, the plaintiff, being on a visit to her mother at the premises in question, had occasion to go upon the piazza, and while there she accidentally fell and sustained severe injuries in the leg and elsewhere, for which she claims damages to the amount of $10,000. The defense set up was that the premises were rented at a reduced rent, owing to their dilapidated condition, and there being no contract with the landlord to repair, he was liable neither to the tenant or her visitor for any injury resulting from a condition of non-repair. The case is still on.

Culver & Robinson for plaintiff; Mann & Parsons for defendant.

MARINE COURT—TRIAL TERM—DEC. 8.

Before Judge Gross and a Jury.

THREE-CENT LAGER AND WHAT BECAME OF IT.

Albert Scabel vs. Henry Parker.—The plaintiff in this action is a Newark lager-beer brewer. In the early part of last Summer, the defendant, having established himself as a retailer of lager-beer in the Bowery, not far away from the Atlantic Garden, and on the opposite side of the street, undertook to sell lager at three cents a glass, while all the other respectable places were selling at the usual price of five cents. The defendant's business proved to be not so successful as he had expected, and at the end of the season he was indebted to his brewer over $200, to recover which this suit was brought.

The defense was, that the plaintiff sold very bad beer to defendant; that his customers complained very much, and cried down the lager to such an extent that his regular custom fell off from $800 per day, which it was at the beginning of the season, to about $80, when the lager became very bad. It was sour and otherwise objectionable some of the witnesses testified, so much so, that numerous barrels of it had to be thrown into the street. The trial of the case occupied two days. After the summing up of counsel for the respective parties, and an able and impartial charge by Judge GROSS, the jury, after a brief consultation, rendered a verdict for the plaintiff for the full amount claimed.

For plaintiff, Mr. Peter COOK; for the defendant, Mr. J. H. Hall.

THURSDAY, Dec. 8—P. M.

The sales of Gold, today, were at 110⅛@110¾ ₱ cent. The fluctuations being so very slight, the speculation in the Gold Room created less interest than usual. The Gold for cash delivery was easy, and 5@6 ₱ cent. Interest was paid to carry over balances. A firmer feeling in Exchange imparted steadiness to the Gold market. Bills on London, of the standard names, advanced to 109 ₱ cent. The supply of Bills from the Southern markets was not so free this morning, while the demand here was larger than yesterday.

The Public Funds were steady and the 5-20s of 1867 exceptionally firm, although one or two of the prominent dealers offered large sums to the Treasury, the aggregate sum being $2,750,000, and the accepted offers $1,000,000, as follows:

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

The King of Wurtemberg has concurred in the proposal that King WILLIAM should assume the title of Emperor of Germany. The Italian Parliament was opened on Monday by the KING, who said in his speech that with Rome for the capital the edifice begun by CHARLES ALBERT would be crowned, and the freedom of Italy secured. With regard to the Pope, he said it was the duty of the nation to secure to the Supreme Pontiff the free exercise of his religious offices and the maintenance of his relations with the Catholic world. With regard to the Spanish CROWN, he said a sister nation had invited his son to rule over her destinies, and he rejoiced in the great honor conferred on his dynasty, and it would bring equivalent benefits to Spain....A railway collision occurred on Monday near London, by which five persons were killed and many others injured fatally.... The Prussian KING telegraphs from Versailles Dec. 5, to Berlin, the capture of Orleans, and the successes of the German Army about Rouen. The capture of Orleans was announced to the Parisians by the Germans under a flag of truce. A later telegram from Versailles says the French lost 10,000 in prisoners and seventy-seven cannon in the battles near Orleans, together with four gunboats on the Loire....The general tenor of the Russian dispatches to Vienna, Florence, Tours and Constantinople, is that the granting of the Russian demand is essential to the peace of Europe.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, yesterday, a bill was introduced by Mr. WILSON, to prevent assessments upon Government employes for political or other purposes. Any official allowing such assessment or employe paying it, is made liable to dismissal and a fine not exceeding $1,000. It also prohibits the giving of presents or gratuities to Government officials for anything done in connection with their official duties. Mr. POMEROY, of Kansas, offered a joint resolution proposing a constitutional amendment granting suffrage to women. A memorial against the construction of a bridge over the Ohio at Cincinnati according to the present plan was offered and referred to the Committee on Commerce. After a short Executive Session the Standing Committees were announced, and the Senate adjourned.

In the House, a remonstrance of New-York envelope makers, printers and stationers, against the Government stamped envelopes, was presented, a number of new bills and resolutions introduced, and a memorial of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce against the Cincinnati and Newport Bridge submitted, and then the consideration of the bill revising the Postal laws was resumed. The pending question was Mr. FARNSWORTH'S amendment abolishing the franking privilege. There was a protracted debate on this, the principal ground of opposition being that it did not abolish the franking privilege in reality, but continued it in a new form. The main argument in its favor was that it prevented the counterfeiting of the signatures of members, and would therefore prevent a large amount of fraud heretofore practiced. The provision for allowing each member $100 a session for postage on his private correspondence was particularly objected to, and a motion to strike this out was sustained. A motion to strike out all of Mr. FARNSWORTH'S amendment, after the first section, was rejected, and the vote was taken on its adoption. It was lost by a vote of 70 to 102. Mr. HILL, of New-Jersey, then moved to strike out the section of the bill relating to the Franking privilege, thereby virtually abolishing it. This was agreed to—yeas, 98; nays, 78. An amendment was then offered allowing the free interchange of newspapers and magazines, and the free circulation of weekly papers in the county of publication. Pending this question, after noticing the death of ROBERT RIDGEWAY, late member from Virginia, the House adjourned till Monday.

GENERAL.

In the National Board of Trade, yesterday, the question of importations direct to interior towns was discussed, and resolutions asking Congress to modify the regulations governing transportation inland of imported goods in various particulars. Resolutions advocating reform in the civil service, and the passage of a proper civil service law, were adopted unanimously. Grain transportation, cotton tare, State tax on non-resident traders and agents, and a resolution of respect to the memory of the late Gen. WALBRIDGE, occupied the rest of the session.

The President, among other nominations, sent to the Senate yesterday the name of Columbus Delano to be Secretary of the Interior; Vice-Admiral D. D. Porter, to be Admiral; Rear-Admiral S. C. Rowan, to be Vice-Admiral; Commodore T. A. Jenkins, to be Rear-Admiral; Capt. J. R. Mullany, to be Commodore; Benjamin H. Bristow, to be Solicitor-General; Clement H. Hill, to be Assistant-Attorney-General; M. J. Cramer, of Kentucky, to be Minister to Denmark. Among the confirmations by the Senate was that of Mr. Delano as Secretary of the Interior.

The Roman Catholics of Buffalo made an imposing demonstration of sympathy with the Pope, yesterday, consisting of a procession and religious ceremonies, with addresses in English, French and German. An address to the Pope in the form of resolutions expressing homage and obedience to the Holy See, sympathy in the "affliction and outrage" to which the Pope and the Church are subjected; condemnation of the Italian occupation of Rome; a protest against the violation of the right of Catholics to be governed by a chief exempt from and independent of all civil power; a promise to still recognize PIUS IX. as the lawful King of Rome, and a pledge of co-operation in any movement of the Catholic world to maintain the integrity of his sovereignty.

The New-Mexico Legislature is in session, meeting and adjourning from day to day until the question of the legality of the session is determined, some of the lawyers holding that, under the act of Congress, the first of the biennial sessions cannot be held until Dec. 1, 1871.

The Winter Garden Theatre in Cincinnati was destroyed by fire on Wednesday night. Loss $8,000. The Methodist Book Concern, adjoining, was damaged to the amount of $25,000.

WILLIAM BEALS, State Senator, and member of the firm of BEALES & Co., proprietors of the Boston Post, died in Boston, yesterday, aged eighty-six.

A former Chairman of the Board of Indian Commissioners, in an interview with the President yesterday, gave information of gigantic frauds and overcharges in the provisions supplied in the Indian countries.

The citizens of Tulare County, California, have lynched two Indians, the murderers of the BONSELL family, and are in pursuit of a third.

The funeral of Gen. WALBRIDGE will take place from Ingleside, near Washington, at 1 P. M. on Saturday.

The Proper Democratic Candidate for the Presidency.

From all that we can learn, the Democratic leaders—by which we mean TWEED and his friends, for the respectable Democrats are at present nowhere—are about to make a very serious mistake. With the careful attention to their interests which we hope distinguishes us, it is our duty to protect them against their own follies. They talk of choosing Gov. HOFFMAN as their candidate for Presidential honors. We must admit that Gov. HOFFMAN, like Mayor HALL, has been "very useful" to them. His unsuspecting nature is a great point in his favor. Put a bill before him for enabling two or three men to seize all the income of a great railroad, and he signs it as if he were a bridegroom signing his "marriage lines." Although he has known TWEED and SWEENY intimately for some years past, he has no idea even now that they are unprincipled rascals. Regarded as mere "ancillary qualities," these are so many brilliant feathers in Gov. HOFFMAN'S cap. But he has one defect, and we are bound to point it out. It is understood that he still wishes people to believe that he is an honest man. If he were dining with the reader, for instance, he would try to convince him that adverse criticisms upon his character are dictated merely by party malignity; that the TIMES attacks him for the purpose of making political capital; that TWEED, SWEENY and HALL are pious, well-meaning persons, quite fit to sit by the side of Mr. SHEARMAN as members of HENRY WARD BEECHER'S church. He would further endeavor to persuade the reader that if the Republicans were in power they would do just the same as TWEED and his friends. All this shows that he is still what his friend TWEED calls an "off-ox"—that he has scruples, and that some day or other he might feel in the humor to kick down the ladder by which he has risen.

Now, we have a man to suggest who is absolutely free from any of these drawbacks. If he had been made expressly for the service of the Ring he could not have suited it better. No scruples of any kind would ever stand in his way. If he were asked to sanction a great swindling scheme, he would do it as part of the work to which he is accustomed. No matter how vast the scheme might be, it would seem mere child's play to him. His hand has been in for that sort of business from the day that he first discovered for himself the immortal truth that the great majority of mankind are fools. You could not frighten him with paltry projects for misappropriating a million or two here and there. He has already managed much bigger jobs than that. On this side of his character, therefore, he is perfectly unobjectionable.

Then, again, his training and education mark him out as the best person in the world to represent the Democracy of today. He has always lived by his wits. When he fed the bears in a menagerie, he doubtless tried to "crib" something for himself from their dinners. When he peddled spools of cotton and shirt-buttons round the country, we hope his customers looked carefully after their change. He is almost as illiterate as TWEED himself, and therefore must be a man after the "Boss'" own heart. When he writes a letter in which he wishes to say "I come," he spells it thus—"i kome," which is, of course, very pleasing. He always uses a little i, with a dot over it, for the first person singular. In order to obviate the injurious effects of this method of carrying on a correspondence, he keeps a "literary gent" by his side to revise and correct his august compositions. TWEED naturally likes him all the better for his ignorance of books and "all that kind of humbug," and would much prefer him to HALL, who is always getting the gang into scrapes through his ambitious literary flourishes. There is no fear that the candidate in question would ever make himself ridiculous by writing a palavering letter about somebody's "ancillary qualities," and then getting himself further into the mud by saying that ancillar was Latin for maid-servant. The Mayor was perhaps thinking of anser, the Latin for goose.

The man whose name we now "fling to the breeze," as the Tweedites would say, has had his moral character thoroughly tried, and come out of the ordeal like Dutch metal after a good scraping. He has his little weaknesses, perhaps, but they only endear him to TWEED and his confederates. People say that he is a very depraved and coarse-minded man, and lives like a pig, but that must be a mistake, because when he appeared on a platform lately to address a great political meeting, Mr. AUGUST BELMONT, the Chairman, did not rise to leave the room. That seems to settle the question of his fitness to take part in political life. At Long Branch, during the Summer, he used to appear on the public drive with strange-looking women, but then they were never the same women for two days together, so that no stain rests upon his character. He has always plenty of money, because the people to whom it belongs somehow are never able to get hold of it, and we do not see why our candidate should be blamed for spending freely what it costs him nothing to obtain.

This worthy man speaks the language with almost as much fluency as TWEED or SWEENY, so that if he had to refer to "those persons" he would say "them people"—which would render him a very effective orator on a public platform. He does not teach a class in a Sunday-school, but his influence over church members is very great, and his position in society may be judged of from the fact that Mr. DAVID DUDLEY FIELD is always ready to give him the benefit of his advice. His acquaintance among the Judges is rather extensive, and it may be said without exaggeration that some of them would do anything to serve him. He knows nothing of politics, but there again he is on a level with his friend TWEED, who regards bribery as the sole avenue to power or distinction. These two eminent persons could sit and compare each other's ignorance every Sunday over a bowl of the celebrated punch in Mr. TWEED'S Fifth-avenue garden. In case of a "row," the candidate has a regiment at his beck and call which he boasts would do anything he ordered. He speaks of his comrades as "them soldier fellers." They are all very proud of him, as they have every reason to be.

There was a time, and that not so very long ago—say in "Prince JOHN" VAN BUREN'S day—when we could scarcely have recommended this candidate as the proper representative of the Democratic Party. But now all the intellect and respectability of the party are trodden into the gutter, and men like Mr. SAMUEL TILDEN possess no real power or influence. They are names, and nothing more. They are trotted out when "respectability" is the article in demand, but for the rest of the year they are done up in a neat parcel and put on a high shelf. If HORACE SMITH could come to life again he would address Mr. TILDEN, or Mr. HUNT, or any other of the "old school" of Democrats, in the language he applied to the mummy in Belzoni's exhibition:

"Speak! for thou long enough hast acted dummy;
Thou hast a tongue—come, let us hear its tune;
Thou'rt standing on thy legs above ground, mummy!
Revisiting the glimpses of the moon,
Not like thin ghosts or disembodied creatures,
But with thy bones, and flesh, and limbs, and features."

But the appeal would be in vain, for TWEED and SWEENY have bewitched all the better class of Democrats, and they are as nerveless and as silent as the sleepers in the enchanted hall. The rascals alone are at the front. They have intrenched themselves in every position, and only want a perfectly unscrupulous person of their own kidney to stand at their head. We say to them—"Good friends, excellent rulers! do not waste your time over HOFFMAN—he has a chicken heart. Stick, instead, to the candidate we recommend to your notice, for he is one of yourselves, and will never cause you a moment's uneasiness." If this disinterested advice is not taken, it is no fault of ours.—We had, by the by, nearly forgotten to mention—not that it would have signified much, because everybody knows him—that the name of the model candidate is JAMES FISK, Jr.

France and Its Prospects.

To those who consider thoughtfully the crisis through which France is passing, the question will often occur whether she will derive any permanent benefit from these terrible sufferings and disasters. The French people are sufficiently intelligent and quick-witted, and it would seem that they must now recognize some of the defects of their social and political system, written as they are in letters of blood and fire over the land. To all foreign observers, the palpable and fatal feature of their system has been its centralization in the capital city, and the degradation of the popular character by a despotism.

A whole nation cannot give up its most valued interests for twenty years to a military adventurer of no genius, and only dignified by a great name, without losing self-reliance and its manly virtues. Despotism crushes out the vigor and courage of a people. Every civil office is filled with the tools of the despotic leader. The army becomes a Prætorian Guard, and its Generals, knowing that they create the Empire, show no subordination and enforce no discipline. All the positions of honor and duty are merely the means by which the Emperor's favorites fill their pockets and escape arduous labor. No work is honestly done. The cadres of a regiment are falsely filled, so that some Imperial servant can draw pay for men not in service. Ammunition, ordnance, and provisions are purchased and stored under dishonest vouchers, so that the Courtly favorites may receive money for what is not bought. Everything military is shoddy. The martial Empire is one vast sham. The army is lazy, luxurious, and insubordinate. The officers take the toils of a campaign in a comfortable carriage, and dread hardship and labor. The privates neither respect nor fear their officers. This vast Imperial bubble needs only the prick of the German sword to go off in air. Before the war, a French General of high position, seeing the tendency of centralization and Imperialism, is reported to have said to the Emperor, "Sire, one day your Prefects will ruin the Empire!" That is, it would be found that there is no local administration in France. The lamentable failure now in the French rural districts to organise any sort of vigorous military opposition to the Germans, is one of the most striking fulfillments of this prediction. It is safe to say that no foreign enemy could have had a long line of communication for hundreds of miles over American or English territory without having it broken a hundred times by locally-organized resistance. Yet the Prussians march through France as carelessly as the British used to do through Northern India, fearing no "raid" or sudden attack. They have learned to despise the French as an inferior race. So cowed have the peasantry become that one very friendly authority, writing from interior France, states that not only would they yield Alsace and Lorraine for peace, but "each peasant would give up his neighbor's farm" for such a blessing. So enfeebled and disorganized by Imperialism have the army become, that another witness says that a ten-miles' march in the day will "knock up" a French corps, and even now, with France crushed under the iron heel of the foreigner, the soldiers in the Provinces are mutinous, and the Generals quarrelsome and insubordinate.

These last great faults, we believe, are being rapidly corrected by the French Administration. M. GAMBETTA has shown great vigor in repressing mutinies and dismissing refractory Generals. Gen. TROCHU has apparently drilled his motley crowd of soldiers into subordination and discipline. The armies of France will soon learn to obey and to endure hardship. But whether centralization will be so easily unlearnt, is a more difficult question. It has been ingrained in the French nation for many generations. Paris, too, has shown herself worthy of her position. No words of praise can ever exaggerate the courage, heroism, constancy and resources shown by that city of idlers and pleasure-hunters, in forming itself into a fortified camp, and looking, for months, death by famine in the face or the awful destruction of a bombardment, without an apparent tremor or unmanly dread. Paris has for months saved France from devastation. She will still be held worthy to command; and though Cæsarism be dead, we fear centralism will still live. All nations but the French note, at this time, with disgust, the prevailing "unveracity" of the French leaders and of the populace. All appear to be afraid to face facts. Through the whole war, this has evidently been the curse of both Government and people. Hardly any one seemed to wish to know the truth. No more terrible sympton of the decadence of a nation can appear. The hopeful sign, however, even here, is that the apparently best leader in France is the one "silent and veracious" man,—Gen. TROCHU,—who has never deceived the populace, and who, beyond any, foresaw the defects in the French military system. M. GAMBETTA, on the other hand, though an able man, evidently belongs to the other class, who have brought such disasters on France.

A defect like this must be deeply seated in the French character. This war may have brought it out. If it have, and if Imperialism be forever rooted out of French soil, then may the French themselves, in future generations, own that this fearful "trial of fire" has regenerated the nation.

How the Public are Duped.

Before the recent elections, when exposures of the true character of the Tammany schemers might have been productive of some good, the New-York Herald threw all its influence upon their side, and did its best to convince the public that the "Ring" really managed the City very well, and deserved to be reinstated in power.

Now that opposition cannot affect the course of the election, the Herald is unmuzzled, and is allowed or chooses to tell the truth about its friends. What it called white a few days ago it now very decidedly pronounces to be black; and some of its readers must be a little puzzled to account why their paper advised them to vote for HALL and the rest of the crew, if they really are such rascals as they are now given to understand.

Within two or three days past the Herald has denounced the wicked jobbery connected with the new Court-house—has declared that "the whole power of Tammany, and, consequently, over the City and politics of the State, is in the hands of three or four men at most"—that these men are creating jobs innumerable—that our citizens will shortly "find themselves "overwhelmed with taxes and debt."

When we have put forward these statements, knowing them to be true, the Herald and its satellites boldly denied them. Probably there is some portion of the public which attached importance to the denial. Now that the Herald echoes our very words, what can these people think of the Tammany faction, or of the journals which do its work during an election?

There are some papers which cannot afford not to publish the advertisements by means of which TWEED and his friends bribe a section of the Press. But the Herald must not be included in this category. The wonder is that the Herald condescends to receive advertisements which are now among the most notorious means of corruption used by the Ring. The appearance of City or County advertisements in any newspaper is a mark of its disgrace—a sign, open and avowed, that it has been sold or gagged, and is, consequently, false to the public. To this rule there is not a single exception. How, then, can the Herald afford to publish these advertisements? Above all, is it fair to work for the Ring just before an election, and then, when all the mischief is done, to turn round and tell the public that they are fools for allowing themselves to be deceived? Those miserable tools of the Ring, JOHN JACOB ASTOR, MOSES TAYLOR and MARSHALL O. ROBERTS, could scarcely play a more treacherous or disgraceful trick than this.

Republican Reorganization in this City.

Tammany Hall, it seems, is determined to try and manage the Republican Party of this City another year. Under orders from the "Ring," calls have been issued by so-called Republican associations in various Assembly districts for primary elections, to be held this evening, to elect delegates to a new Republican General Committee for 1871. Most of the signatures to these calls are unauthorized, and the Republicans whose names are thus forged have long since repudiated all connection with the faction under whose direction these primaries are to be held. The real Republicans of New-York will pay no attention to them, and it is safe to say that nine-tenths of the votes cast will be polled by Tammany Democrats, in whose interest the meetings are held. It will be seen by advertisement in another column that the committee of twelve appointed by the regular Republican General Committee to co-operate with the State Committee in reorganizing the party in this City on a sound Republican basis, has already entered upon its duties, and at the next meeting of the State Committee, which is to be held in a few days, the plan of reorganization will be perfected and made known. Meanwhile, true Republicans are cautioned to take no notice of the spurious primaries to be held this evening, as they are entirely unauthorized, and their proceedings will be of no effect.

The Log of an Air-Ship.

Although the right to fly may be common to all, the art of flying judiciously comes to the aeronaut, as to the little bird, only through repeated effort and frequent failure. M. SEZANNE, a French engineer, who lately took a sail through the air from Paris to Mans, has too prudent a regard for himself to grasp at any such precarious distinction. He is clearly one of the few among the frail sons of men who are willing to profit by the experience of others. As an aeronaut M. SEZANNE has been a success. The fast-galloping Uhlans tried to catch him—and couldn't. Divers sharp-shooters tried to acquaint him with the contents of their needle-guns—and were equally at fault. Nor were the powers of the air more successful in their assaults. They dashed him, it is true, against the rugged face of a precipice and mauled him desperately among the branches of trees. Yet so adroit was M. SEZANNE, so well stored was his mind with the history of other people's aerial misfortunes, and so willing was he to profit by them, that he escaped with only a few insignificant scratches, accomplished all that he set out to do, brought his air-ship—we are gratified to hear she is named the Fulton—fairly down to friendly soil, and has now given to the world the log of his adventurous voyage.

M. SEZANNE had the advantage of being accompanied by a sailor whose curious name is LEGLOARME, and perhaps to this companionship part of the good fortune of the trip is to be ascribed. The balloon got away from Paris with some trouble, in a strong wind. Mr. SEZANNE managed, however, to skim over the forts at a height of 1,200 metres—just the range of a Chassepot. The Prussians below began to practice on the Fulton with great industry. "The firing," says M. SEZANNE, "soon made itself heard." But it did not make itself felt, and the dissatisfied marksmen bellowed forth numerous Teutonic insults and execrations, which their object carefully noted down, possibly with an eye to future satisfaction. After this, the aeronaut made a series of interesting experiments. He found that, by a minute system of observations and the use of the barometer, he could determine his direction, and, by judicious handling of ballast, in some measure control that direction. Economy of ballast is one secret, he thanks, of mastering the aerial situation. M. SEZANNE left Paris in the morning, at 8:15; crossed the Prussian lines at 9; sighted the tower of Montlhéry at 9:53, and the cathedral of Chartres at 10:20. Mans was seen at noon, but not reached for some time after. Descent was perhaps put off a little too long, since at last, instead of being made in the open plains, it occurred perforce in the wooded country of La Vendée. This final part of the voyage was also the most critical and thrilling.

When it was thought needful to go down the valve was pulled as usual, but, owing to atmospheric conditions, the descent was fearfully rapid. "The barometer rose," says the voyager, "as if the needle had been pushed with the finger." M. SEZANNE and LEGLOARME rushed for the ballast and threw it out in quantities, but the machine continued to approach the earth. Without having time, he tells us, to look at the barometer, M. SEZANNE saw by the increasing size of the trees that the balloon was rushing with dreadful speed to the ground. He cried to the sailor to cut the fastening of the "guide-rope," and this was instantly done. The "guide-rope," a heavy knotted cord some 1,800 feet long, is rolled in the car and fastened with pack-thread. When this is cut the rope runs out to the earth, one end being fast to the car. The fall of this line slightly relieved the balloon, but did not arrest its descent. The anchor was then thrown out, and directly after the car dashed violently against the earth. Freed from this weight, the balloon sprang up again, and the adventurers were flung, with a sort of ricochet movement, across a forest in jumps of five or six hundred feet. Thus they whirled on, in the words of M. SEZANNE'S log,

"holding tightly on to our ropes, with our heads bent down to avoid the branches which truck us in the face. All this time we held the valve wide open. The balloon became less and less distended. The guide-rope and anchor, dragging on the ground and tearing up the branches and the hedges, slackened our speed. At last the car came full into an apple-tree which it rubbed the wrong way. The tree groaned in its language, while the ear expressed by small cracks that the adventure was not to its taste. We again went beyond the apple-trees; but the anchor which dragged after us hooked itself so firmly to a trunk that a shock ensued so severe that the balloon could not stand it; it split throughout its whole length, and fell with us in the most pitiable manner. But for a few scratches on our hands we were unhurt. All this happened so rapidly, and our position was so comical, thrown as we were into the midst of the ropes and parcels, that we burst into a fit of laughter, not having had time to feel any fear."

It is gratifying to know that an adventure so perilous and daring ended with so little harm, and that the memoranda of M. SEZANNE include useful additions to the stock of authentic aerial science. His plan of keeping a detailed record should be generally adopted. Probably more balloon ascents have been made this year than in any twenty that ever preceded it; and the collation of the varied experience thus gained, should furnish data of permanent value.

MINOR TOPICS.

A reporter from this journal tried to ascertain, yesterday, some facts in reference to TWEED and SWEENY'S contributions to the City exchequer. As we are publishing so much about the amounts withdrawn from the public funds by these men, it seemed only fair to tell the other side of the story. That vigilant guardian of the public interests, NATHANIEL SANDS, Secretary of the Citizen's Association—salary from the Ring, $10,000 a year—gave the following valuable information: "It is a long lane that has no turning. Every dog has his day. There may be a chance of returning favors." The oracle of Delphi was not more mysterious. We really cannot make out anything definite from Mr. SANDS' statements, but perhaps the reader can find an answer to his conundrums. In the meantime we hope Mr. SANDS will continue to do his best for the public. We could not get on without him now.

The Transcript of Saturday last would have cost about $9,568 to print, in the usual course of business. It brought in a clear profit of $56,448 to TWEED and his associates. Its publication was as deliberate a piece of knavery as pocket-picking in the street, for no one sees the Transcript—only one hundred copies of it are printed. TAX-payers who think we oppose the Ring from party motives had better get this volume of 504 pages, printed at their expense, and then decide whether TWEED and his friends are or are not what their journal called them some time ago—impudent swindlers.

VICTOR EMMANUEL, in his speech at the opening of the Italian Parliament, is studiously indefinite regarding the future relations of his Government with the Pope. Nobody imagined that the Italian rule in Rome would interfere with "the free exercise of the religious offices" of the "Supreme" Pontiff—now, be it noted, no longer "sovereign"—so that the use of an empty phrase like this, may be accepted as a proof that the excommunicated King of Italy is disposed to concede very little to the head of his Church. The reference to "the maintenance of his (the Pope's) relations with the Catholic world," would, from an Ultramontane stand-point, mean the destruction of the entire edifice whose crowning the King had just announced, so that it may safely be taken for granted, that this very elastic recommendation will be found to have little beyond the merely verbal significance of the one preceding.

Senator WILSON'S action in introducing a bill to prevent assessments of money upon Government clerks for political or other purposes, implies more faith in Congressional virtue than is warranted by experience. When the Senate displays sufficient self-denial to abolish the franking privilege, we shall be better prepared to believe that it will forcibly keep the hands of political managers out of the pockets of Government servants. The bill itself, like that by which Mr. TRUMBULL last session attempted to restrain Senators and Representatives from meddling with the appointment of clerks, attempts to cure evils which really require a more radical remedy. Civil service reform, by taking clerkships out of the hands of politicians, and making retention in office contingent on merit, would prevent the abuses to which Messrs. WILSON and TRUMBULL object. Nothing else will.

"The furniture in Senator TWEED'S mansion was made to order from original designs, and is said to be the finest in New-York."

The above is from the Evening Mail, a paper which wears the Tweed collar in the shape of the Corporation advertisements, and therefore, as it dare not utter a word against TWEED or his set, may be presumed to speak "by authority" in favor of them. What we want to know is, who paid for the furniture bragged about in the above paragraph? Is it not the fact that the property in question must be reckoned among the involuntary contributions made to TWEED'S "palatial mansion" by the tax-payers of New-York?

Let the traveling public take heart. It is becoming possible to make a Railroad Company pay for their negligence. Signor BRIGNOLI—the well-known tenor—got $7,333 33 out of the Chicago and Great Western Company, the other day, as compensation for a dislocated shoulder. There are probably scores of people who have at this moment claims quite as valid, but who, from utter hopelessness of accomplishing anything by the agency of the Courts, let the companies pass. The present case may serve as a seasonable reminder to future sufferers that if they only take the trouble to seek redress, they will probably obtain it. It is also calculated to have a salutary effect upon the companies themselves, who, though perfectly insensible to any arguments regarding the preservation of their passengers' lives and limbs, are acutely sensitive to an appeal which touches their pockets.

The von Moltke of local strategy is, certainly, Mayor HALL. When the County Supervisors least expect it, he astonishes them by the production of a clause in the lately-amended law, giving him a practical power of veto over the resolutions of that body. This clause seems to have found its way into the bill by an exercise of the legislative hocus-pocus familiar at Albany, since the Chairman of the Committee who had charge of the engrossing of the statute in question appears to have been unaware of its existence. The Mayor has, at present, to face the additional opposition of the Court-house Commissioners; but whatever be the result of his quarrel with the Supervisors, it is perfectly certain that this latter case, though greatly resembling the proverbial contingency in which honest men get their own, will in its results be a marked exception to the rule.

It has been claimed for the Grand Army of the Republic that it is thoroughly non-partisan in its character, and was organized simply for the purpose of perpetuating among its members that fraternity of feeling which was engendered during the war. Gen. LOGAN, who is now the chief executive officer of the organization, if reports from Washington are to be credited, is using the organization for political purposes, and striving to defeat the appointment of Gen. PLEASONTON, as Commissioner of Internal Revenue, because Gen. PLEASONTON opposed him (LOGAN) at the last election of officers, when the latter was chosen Commander. The Grand Army of the Republic is a good institution in its way, and has done good service in caring for the disabled soldiers of the war, but its usefulness, and its very life, will be sacrificed the moment it is dragged into politics. The rank and file of the organization protest against this action on the part of Gen. LOGAN.

The cost of the new Court-house at Harlem "is not yet estimated," although the plans are, obviously, complete, and the builder has been selected. The circumstance would be rather remarkable were the building a private one, but as the work is a Corporation job, arranged under the auspices of Senators TWEED and GENET, with comrades of similar feather, the fact excites no surprise. It would be rather a surprising circumstance, however, if, when the estimates are at length sufficiently "stretched" for the purposes of the Ring, the actual cost does not astound the public.

The interesting series of political and personal reminiscences contributed to the Boston Journal by Gen. SCHOULER has drawn a no less interesting letter from Hon. CHRISTOPHER MORGAN, who, twenty years ago, was a Representative in Congress from Cayuga, and who, during the administration of Gov. FISH, was Secretary of State. This will be found on another page

"ROMEO AND JULIET" AT NIBLO'S.

"Romeo and Juliet" was acted at Niblo's, last evening, for the benefit of Mr. WALTER MONTGOMERY. A performance of moderate evenness was offered. Two persons better fitted by nature to represent respectively Romeo and Juliet, than Mr. MONTGOMERY and Mrs. SCOTT-SIDDONS, could not easily be found, and it is simple truth to state that the looks of both artists aided the effectiveness of their efforts in no limited degree. The balcony scene was especially impressive from this cause, which had, indeed, a pleasant influence upon the whole entertainment. To this, besides, Mr. MONTGOMERY lent something more than the charm of his person, in form of a conception denoting the intelligence and study he has brought to the interpretation of all his Shakespearean parts, and his usual skill as an elocutionist. We should be happy to record other than purely physical merits for Mrs. SCOTT-SIDDONS' picture of Juliet. Mr. MARK SMITH was Friar Lawrence, and Mr. BECKS was the Mercutio. The representation, we must not omit to mention, was the last to occur at Niblo's this week. The theatre will be closed to-night and to-morrow, that the final rehearsals of the "Black Crook" may be on a scale of exceptional completeness.

ST. MARY THE VIRGIN.

Dedication Services at the New Episcopal Church of St. Mary the Virgin—Sermon by Bishop Southgate.

The Protestant Episcopal Church of St. Mary the Virgin was solemnly dedicated yesterday by two services—one at 7 A. M., and the other, at which Bishop SOUTHGATE preached, at 10½ A. M. This last service, consisting of morning prayer and the holy communion service, was attended by a full congregation, and Rev. Dr. STAUNTON, Rev. Mr. MCCOOK, of Hartford; Rev. Dr. BATTERSON, of Philadelphia; Rev. Mr. BETTS, of Columbia College; Father J. BRADLEY, and others.

The church, which stands in Forty-fifth-street, near Seventh-avenue, is built of red Nyack stone, with trimmings of Ohio sand-stone. It consists of a nave, one aisle, chancel, and transept, is 100 feet long, 54 feet wide, and 75 feet high from floor to roof. The chancel is 31 feet by 29, and is separated from the nave by a rood-screen having stalls within, for the accommodation of the choir. The organ occupies a recess in the transept on the right. This transept is 32 feet by 36, and in the angle formed by it and the aisle is a tower in course of erection, which will reach an altitude of 150 feet when completed. The edifice, which, of course, is in an unfinished state, was erected by Mr. HALLET, on some ground given by WILLIAM B. ASTOR, at a cost of $50,000. Rev. F. MCKEE BROWN is the pastor. During the services he announced that there would be services daily, as follows: Communion service at 7 A. M.; morning prayer at 9 A. M., and evening prayer, with sermon, at 8 P. M. He also read a letter from Bishop POTTER, who was unable to be present, congratulating the pastor on the opening of this church, and invoking God's blessing upon its future.

Bishop SOUTHGATE preached from the first chapter of Acts, fourteenth verse: "Mary, the mother of Jesus." He remarked in the opening of his sermon that his theme was one seldom chosen by Protestant preachers, because they were ever fearful of falling into the erroneous way of regarding the Virgin as peculiar to the Roman Catholic faith. This silence, however, he did not consider advisable, and hoped that Protestants would try to get out of this partisan way of regarding things holy. After all, continued he, the subject of this discourse was undoubtedly a saint of God, selected by Him to be the mother of Christ, and when he conferred such an honor upon her, it alone pointed to her as pre-eminently the best of her sex. Indeed, it was a fair presumption that she was created to be the virgin mother of Christ. Today, said he, is the sixteenth anniversary of the promulgation of the Roman Catholic doctrine of the immaculate conception, for which there is no foundation to be found in the Scriptures or among the traditions and usages of the early Christians. It was the great sea of heresy which originated in the little ripple of super-overweening love and honor to the Virgin—the thing to be avoided. In speaking of her early history, he observed that very little was known of it, other than that she was of the house of David, the tribe of Judah, and the betrothed of a poor carpenter, Joseph. Then at the age of fifteen, the angel of the Lord appeared to her and saluted her as "Blessed among women," asking her at the same time to take upon her a maternity which in the eyes of the world at that time would not only ruin, but kill her, for such was the law against adultery. Then it

COVERED WITH MYSTERY

Thimble-Rigging in the Tax Commissioners' Office.

What Amount of Taxes Do Sweeny, Tweed & Co. Pay the City?—Blissful Ignorance of the Commissioners on that Subject—Mr. Sands on a High Horse.

It is a question anxiously put but never answered: "How much in taxes do the high dignitaries of the Ring pay in pursuance of the laws binding on us all?" When complaint is made of the enormous increase of City taxation, protests are silenced by the counter cry that the men who make the taxes are the greatest property holders, and therefore the most deeply interested in the welfare of the City, and in its sound financial standing. This seems so very plausible that no one can complain. But the frequent iteration, the, indeed, perpetual harping on this one string, has led to the inquiry as to the exact amount these Ring members return to the people in the goodness of their hearts. What is the sum of SWEENY'S taxes? What does the "Boss" pay for the privilege of presiding over a palace of marble and a stable finished off in rose-wood? What do his blocks of houses pay into the public coffers? Very simple questions indeed, and easy to answer, one would think.

THE LITTLE GAME OF THE "RING."

There are guarantees of honor and honesty in the workings of all our Departments. True, it is a little game of thimble-rigging, in which the "Ring" has the deal; but, then, if you will only listen to the "Ring" dealers, you will be convinced that you had an equal chance in it. All you have to do is to keep your eyes about you, and take their word of honor that they will play fairly; then put your money down, and if it disappears, as, of course, it will, why, attribute it, not to double-dealing, but to adverse luck. You must not attempt to raise the thimble and investigate the progress of the little game. Oh no; that isn't part of the gamblers' policy. It is a reflection on the honor of the manager of the game and all his ropers-in. Tammany is the manager in this little game of taxation, and it is not reasonable to suppose that the ropers-in, TWEED, SWEENY, HALL and the rest, are going to submit to a reflection on their honor by having the public scanning their dealing-box too closely during the progress of the play. The public has its safeguards, of course. If you think it is a game at which the people lose too heavily, take advice on the subject. The best legal authorities will inform you that the men who deal this game are no more nor less than your, the public's, servants; that you have only to call on them to lift the thimble to learn not only "where the little joker lies," but how it got there. All you have to do when you suppose that there is something wrong in the official manipulation of the cards, is to drop in at the office of the suspected party and demand a sight of his books. You have a right to do this, no matter how humble your place in life, provided only you are a citizen. This has been the opinion of most people from time immemorial. It is a fond delusion that old fogies hug to their hearts—which gives them a sort of feeling of security—that they and the rest of the public hold thievery by the throat, and that political gamblers and thimble-riggers are held in wholesome awe and subjection by the consciousness that the public is a moral police force with full powers to club.

ROMANCE AND REALITY.

This is the romance of the thing. You, the public, are the "boss." The reality is just the other way. You do not enter the public office as if you owned it. You feel that it owns you. You feel that you are in the presence of your masters—that the gamblers know more than you ever can by any possibility detect. The magnificence of the thing is what settles the business—a magnificence of things which is offset by a reflected magnificence of manner on the part of the gay gamblers of the "Ring."

A WRESTLE WITH FACTS AND FIGURES.

Impressed with the child-like idea that everything was fair and square and above-board in the municipal game of faro now in progress, a TIMES reporter was yesterday constituted a committee of one on the part of the public, to investigate the workings of the tax-gathering and tax-levying machine. The Tax Commissioners were found installed in their little glass houses, or pens, on the second floor of the rusty brown building facing on Chambers-street, to the east of the new Court-house. There was an awful silence, an oppressive weight of secrecy in the very atmosphere. Everything was glass that wasn't brass, and everything was brass that wasn't glass—even to the shirt-studs of the janitor and a few clerks, which were glass, and their faces, which were decidedly metallic. The number of men with jet black mustaches and watch-chains of cable thickness, flitting about, would naturally set a fine-balanced mind into mazes of calculation as to the cost and consumption of hair-dye in this great City.

THE MEN WHO LIVE IN GLASS HOUSES.

The first things that meet one's eye on entering the tomb of the public substance are the little glass houses ranged about, with coffin plates on their doors bearing the names of the Commissioners.

DRAWING TEETH.

Dropping into Mr. SANDS' little glass box, the reporter found a good-natured, black-eyed, stout, ruddy, gray-haired man with an incisive method of giving replies, and a peculiar crabbiness of general manner that was warning to the visitor at once that this was a peculiarly tough lemon to squeeze. Mr. SANDS was acidly urbane, pointedly polite, bitterly genial. His usual flow of spirits was maintained throughout the interview, but there was a change of quality. It was not milk and honey that ran sweetly off his politely-lubricated tongue; it was vitriol. The scene began and progressed pretty nearly as follows:

REPORTER—Mr. SANDS, may I trouble you—

Mr. SANDS, (urbanely)—Well, Sir.

REPORTER—I am attached to the NEW-YORK TIMES—

Mr. SANDS—Humph! (with a shrug and a look that might be translated from the Tammany language to mean, "The devil you are!")

REPORTER—I have come, Sir, to ask you—

THE OLD, OLD STORY.

Mr. SANDS—Yes, I know—about the taxes of public men.

REPORTER—Exactly, Sir; I request the privilege of examining the records to ascertain the exact amount of tax paid by Mr. A. Oakey Hall, Mr. Connolly, Mr. Astor, Mr. Tweed, Moses Taylor and Marshall O. Roberts.

Mr. SANDS—The old thing. The TIMES has sent three different times three different reporters to obtain these same facts, and there have been three different refusals.

REPORTER—Then you will not give me the figures?

Mr. SANDS—Will not? We cannot. How is that? Why, we keep no ledgers; we do not post the accounts of individuals who pay taxes; hence we know nothing of the sum of their payments. That is the way we do business, Sir. The bringing in of ledgers and the posting would involve a great expense and necessitate the employment of an immense clerical force.

SANDS PLEADS IGNORANCE.

REPORTER—But you might approximate—

Mr. SANDS—No; there is no way to learn how the payments of taxes mounts up in individual cases. Besides it is a private matter. It is Mr. HALL'S business and Mr. TWEED'S exclusively, how much taxes they respectively pay. We would not be warranted in prying into private affairs by posting the tax payments in ledgers under personal accounts, and then handing them over to prying newspapers for publication. We have absolutely no right to do this. We are public servants, and have no shadow of right to betray the individual affairs of tax-payers.

THINGS SOMEWHAT MIXED.

REPORTER—Then the accounts are disordered?

Mr. SANDS—There are no personal accounts in the office. We do not hold the man responsible; we hold and charge the house. Frequently another than the owner pays for and gets the credit of paying for property of immense value. This is frequently done with fraudulent intention. Men often transfer property on our books, so far as the party paying and taking receipts for the taxes is concerned. The party so doing we know frequently refers to our books in order to get long credits in business negotiations. We know this, but we cannot help it. We have nothing to do with the names. Hundreds of houses in this City are recorded as the property of A, B & C, and the taxes are receipted for alphabetically. So you see the owner in such case absolutely does not appear.

PUBLIC MEN AND THE RIGHTS OF THE PUBLIC.

REPORTER—But these public men?

Mr. SANDS—They have their rights as well as other people, and are no more known in our transactions than others are. It would not be fair to them to allow you to hurriedly scan the books, for by that means you could not get all the taxes they pay. Their names must not necessarily appear on our books for each tax they pay; they might not appear at all, and yet they might be the largest tax-payers in the City.

REPORTER—But should not the accounts be transferred to something like a ledger system in order to simplify matters on a strict business basis?

Mr. SANDS—Certainly not. Why, just look at the expense and the complications. Why, it would necessitate attention to a multitude of accounts and a posting that would be most bothersome. Why, just think of it; there are 75,000 houses and 170,000 lots to go through. Should we be obliged to open an account for each house and each lot? Two hundred and forty-five thousand accounts—eh?

REPORTER—But there has been so much talk about taxes and politicians, it might be well to make an exception to the rule by posting their accounts, just so that the public might be satisfied on this much-mooted point.

Mr. SANDS—But there is no way of attaining a satisfactory conclusion in this way. I tell you the books may not show how much Mr. Hall, or Tweed, or Astor, or Cooper, or Roberts, or any of the rest pay. Simply, as I said before, because it is not every one who pays his own taxes. And then, again, there are daily transfers of property at the Real Estate Exchange, so that the real tax-payer can be settled on with no more certainty than the owner. Why, there is no way of arriving at these things. Suppose you know a man to be rich—suppose you know a man to be worth $1,000,000—he may have that amount in United States bonds that cannot be taxed, or in railroad stock, which is taxed in the counties through which the road runs, or in bank stock, which pays its own tax. Now, then, where is your individual tax in such a case? Who can tell accurately who pays, and how much? Is it just the same with these taxes? We cannot tell, you know. We don't know anything about it.

NO PROOF THAT THE RING PAY TAXES.

REPORTER—And there is, therefore, no proof that either TWEED, HALL, SWEENY or CONNOLLY pay one cent of taxes?

Mr. SANDS—There is no means of arriving at the total sums they pay. It is an impossibility. The TIMES has created all this trouble by attempting to pry into the private affairs of gentlemen. Here I have been trying for years to establish my good name, and I am attacked—charged with being in league with Tammany. Why, I don't know anything about Tammany—I have nothing to do with it. But it is a long lane that has no turn. Every dog has his day. There may be a chance to return favors.

The round-faced little man gave vent to these ancient "saws" with an acerbity of speech and a vicious sparkle of eye that betokened the suspension of reasoning faculties; so the reporter cut short his bow and retired precipitately from the presence.

THE LOGICAL CONCLUSION.

Summed up, the Commissioners' opinions may therefore be condensed in this: That if Mayor HALL, "Boss" TWEED, "Brains" SWEENY and "Slippery Dick" pay any taxes on their vast acquisitions of real estate, the Tax Commissioners do not know it.

POLITICAL.

PREPARING FOR THE PRIMARIES.

Meetings in the First and Fifteenth Assembly Districts Last Night.

The Republicans of the Fifteenth Assembly District, over whom Mr. HENRY D. LAPAUGH presides, met at No. 246 Thirty-third-street, last evening. A resolution was adopted that a committee of three be appointed to revise the lists of the Association and exclude all but Republicans. A resolution to indorse the acts of Mr. HENRY D. LAPAUGH'S action as President of the Association excited some debate, during which it was charged that other than the regular tickets had been substituted on the night before the election. It was explained that the substitution was authorized by the committee of ten of the district, and that Mr. LAPAUGH was not responsible for it. The resolution was unanimously adopted, and Mr. LAPAUGH returned his thanks for the indorsement of his course. He said that at the last election for delegates to the County Committee, votes were cast by Tammany Republicans, and in that way they ruled the election. He referred to the course pursued by these traitors to the Republican cause, and reviewed the acts of the Harrison-Reed Association, some of the members of which voted the Tammany ticket for State officers. He gave his reasons for voting against JAMES H. ANDERSON for Assembly, stating that he did so because ANDERSON was opposed to the administration of Gen. GRANT, and further, that he was a member of the Harrison-Reed Association, and voted against the regular candidates of the party at the primary election; also, that ANDERSON was running in the interest of ALEXANDER H. FREAR, and that his bills were paid by Tammany. He stated also that Mr. TURNER, the candidate for School Trustee, was a nominee of the Reed Association, though believing that he was a better man than Mr. DECUNA. In this respect he had acted in accordance with the suggestion of the State Central Committee and the Committee of Ten. He said that there were in this district a class of "Hindoos," who were clamorous for straight tickets and refused to indorse the Republican State ticket and the candidate for Mayor. These men went straight for Tammany candidates. Some of these men were in the employ of Tammany, and now that their character was exposed and their influence had waned, Tweed had no further use for them, and they had been recently discharged. In conclusion, he said that he was in favor of hereafter excluding from membership any person who was not a decidedly sound Republican.

The Committee was then appointed to revise the list, and on motion of Dr. WILDER, RALPH P. BARKER, nominally the Vice-President of the Association, was suspended, so that he could not, in future, under any circumstances, act as President in the absence of the regular presiding officer. It was stated that at the last election BARRER peddled the Oakey Hall ticket at the booths.

The meeting then adjourned.

THE FIFTEENTH DISTRICT TAMMANY REPUBLICANS.

The E. Harrison Reed branch of the Fifteenth Assembly District Union Republican Association—which is, more correctly speaking, the Tammany Republican Association, from its well-known opposition to Gen. GRANT and Mr. MURPHY—held a very brief meeting, last evening, at Lincoln Hall, corner of Thirty-third-street and Eighth-avenue. There was a caucus meeting after the adjournment of the Association session, to prepare a ticket for the primary election to take place this evening.

FIRST ASSEMBLY DISTRICT TAMMANY REPUBLICANS.

Last evening, in accordance with a notice published in several newspapers, a number of men who assume the title of the "First Assembly District Union Republican Association," met at No. 122 West Broadway. ANDREW W. LEGGATT assumed the chair, and JOHN W. HEAPE acted as Secretary. The only business transacted was the appointment of a committee to select names for candidates to be voted for at the primary meeting to be held this evening. Several gentlemen declined to serve on the committee—one, a Mr. BATTERSLY, saying he was an "officer-holder." There were a number of firemen and policemen present, several coming from the upper districts to assist in regulating matters. Mr. STUKELY, of the Street Commissioner's Department, and Police-Surgeon KENNEDY evidently having the direction of that branch of the Association. "Hank" SMITH was not on hand, but, as a member remarked, "of course Hank will be present at the primary."

Appeal for Non-Participation in the Tammany Primaries.

The following address, prepared by the Secretary of the Seventeenth Assembly District Republican Association, Mr. DAVID B. MELLISH, and signed by Mr. JOHN R. RUSSELL and others, conveys information which Republicans through out the City will find of great convenience and utility in determining the proper course to pursue at the so-called primary elections to be held this evening:

We desire to call your attention to a few facts. The occasion demands plain words. We believe a clear apprehension of the political situation is all that is necessary to secure from the intelligent and unbiased Republicans of this district a righteous verdict on the issue now pending. Please bear with us in a brief recital from the recent history of our party organization in this City. First, we desire you to recall to mind that a resolution was adopted by the General Committee in October last, which declared that no person holding office directly or indirectly under the Democratic City Government should be eligible to a seat in any Republican Convention." Subsequently, a County Convention was organized by Tammany office-holders, and delegates admitted to seats who by the terms of the call (as above) should have been excluded. This was the culmination of a long train of acts less conspicuous, but identical in character, by which the Republican Party had been scandalized and outraged. The catalogue would be too long for these limits, were particulars given of the plans adopted by men in the pay of Tammany, and calling themselves Republicans, to effect their objects in giving aid and comfort to the enemy. Suffice it to say, that the representatives of the party throughout the State—the State Central Committee—after a careful consideration of the facts, with almost entire unanimity (20 to 1—the exceptions being Police Commissioner SMITH and one or two of his friends) decided that the conduct of the canvass could not be safely intrusted to the so-called Republican Committee of this City, (then reduced to a fraction of the Committee as originally elected, by the retiring of a large number of delegates who were determined in no way to sanction any affiliation with Tammany or acknowledge her control.) The Republican Party of the State, through the State Committee, having thus in the most emphatic manner declared by its acts its want of confidence in said fraction of the Committee, in effect saying it is a body not fit to be trusted by Republicans—having ignored said fraction of the Committee, and thereby placed it in a position where it cannot be recognized as a proper representative body of the Republicans of this City, we are now to consider what ought to be done in the condition of affairs as they exist at this moment. This fraction of the General Committee, as it originally existed, met during the present month and directed a sub-committee to issue a call for primaries to be held by the various associations to elect officers thereof, and delegates for the year 1871. A call has been issued accordingly. We deny that it is done by proper authority. To call the body issuing it the Republican General Committee or even a Republican General Committee, is a misnomer. It is a fraction of the Committee of which not less than forty delegates are in receipt of patronage from Tammany Hall, and is therefore not representative. The question as to authority is fundamental, and not of hair-splitting technicalities. Being a fractional and factional body, un-Republican and non-representative in character, (though we do not assume that there may not be well-meaning and honest Republicans among its members,) its edicts are destitute of validity, and are in no way binding upon the party. For information and guidance perhaps we cannot find the proper conclusion to arrive at more succinctly stated than by recurrence to resolutions adopted by the Anti-Tammany General Committee, composed of Republicans who could not, under their sense of duty to their constituents, continue to act with the faction heretofore referred to. These resolutions are among others adopted by the Anti-Tammany Republican General Committee at a meeting held Dec. 1, 1870:

Resolved, That while we accuse no man of disloyalty to Republican principles, merely because he may be influenced or necessitated to accept employment from our political opponents, yet, in justice to ourselves and for the good name and integrity of the Republican Party, we declare that no office-holder in any Democratic department, or under any wing of Democratic authority, can be eligible to membership or position in the Republican organization of this City.

Resolved, That we, as representatives of the Republican Party in the General Committee of 1870, cannot consort, counsel, or act with Tammany office-holders, either in committees, conventions or district associations.

Resolved, That in view of the facts above recited—all of which can be substantiated by affidavits—and as representative Republican members of the General Committee of 1870, we are convinced that it is not for the interest of the Republican Party of this State that we should issue the customary call for primary elections to constitute a General Committee for 1871; but that, instead of so doing, we respectfully ask the Republican State Committee to take immediate measures for a thorough organization of the party in this City on a plan which shall avoid the frauds and violence of primary elections, secure to us an honest, efficient County Committee and emancipate our local associations at once and forever from the control of Democratic politicians and their Republican allies.

It will be seen that the party is soon to be reorganized on the only safe, fair, and equitable basis. Asking you to carefully reflect on this presentation of some of the main features of the situation, we would then inquire if the conclusion is not forced upon us, that we will the better thwart devices of Tammany, and best subserve the interests of the Republican Party by non-participation in this so-called primary. So believing, the matter is left with your conscientious judgment. It may be added that supporters of the Republican Administration, and the opponents of Tammany Hall do not propose, so far as known, to run any ticket, or take part in the so-called primary, but will await the reorganization throughout the county by the State Committee, in full confidence that there will be a vigorous, pure and efficient organization unpermeated by Tammany influences. It is now evident that the great enemy of the Republican Party in the State and in the nation is the Democratic Charter Ring of the City of New-York. We cannot afford to have our Generals in the pay of the enemy. How happened it that the Charter Ring were able to control the Republican majority of the Legislature last Winter? What, unless it was through the process of subsidizing some of its then acknowledged and influential leaders? How happen it that SMITH, * * * * (the reader will please fill the blank,) and others, then leaders of the Republican Party, have, under the charter which they induced Republicans to support, received most valuable offices, and have become open, active, and most influential organizers of hostility and authors of devoir against the Administration and the Republican Party? How happened it that the new Board of Police, composed of two nominal Republicans and one Democrat (and the seat of two of the Democrats vacant?) should have allowed or caused the force at the late election to be active and passive aids in election frauds, leaving the entire labor and responsibility of checking frauds and arresting offenders to the officers of the federal Government? How happened it that one of the Captains of Police who did aid in bringing to justice before a Federal Court an offender, incurred the censure and reproof of his superiors in the Department? And that this hostility was advertised to the entire force as an admonition against others who might in like case offend? How long can a party be successful which allows itself to acknowledge as leaders men taken in the act of betraying its interests and achieving its own defeat? Show me a man's associates and I will describe to you his character. Shall the Republican Party go to the Blossom Club or to the American Club, or to Tammany Hall to find its bosom friends and its daily and nightly counselors? Is it to be inferred that men who engage in joint speculations, not to say peculations, are likely to be earnest opponents in the very political transactions out of which they arise? These men who sold out the party and achieved its present defeat by the means, are the head of the political comet; the tail is of enormous extent. They lead a host of men to be indifferent to Republican success, and to hope for Democratic success, by the example of what is to be made out of it. The Republican Party cannot be true to itself and opposed to the Republican Administration. The act of assuming opposition to the Federal Administration is a felo-de-se to the party. Intriguing for the success of a Democratic Governor of New-York is an insidious method of attempting to defeat the Republican Party of the Union. There are but two parties—the Republican and Tammany Hall—every man must be on one side or the other of the line that divides them.

POLITICAL NOTES.

The Virginia Legislature, at its present session, will elect a United States Senator.

It is said the new Democratic Senator from Alabama was formerly a citizen of Massachusetts.

"Duke" GWIN is in New-Orleans, and the Times welcomes him as "that veteran statesman and energetic Southern patriot."

The Virginia City (Nevada) Enterprise denies that there is any truth whatever in the report that Mr. FITCH was defeated for Congress by the vote of imported Mormons.

JOSEPH R. LYNDALL is the Republican candidate for the First District of Pennsylvania to fill the vacancy in the State Senate, caused by the death of WILLIAM W. WATT.

The assertion that negro militia have been stationed about the Alabama capitol, is denied by Gov. SMITH, who says he has made no call for militia, white or black.

A citizen of Macon, Ga., announces by advertisement in the city papers that he is "a candidate for tax receiver, entirely dependent on a majority of the votes polled, for the office. Small favors thankfully received, and no particular objection urged to larger ones.'"

Later reports from the First District of New-Hampshire are to the effect that the contest for the Republican nomination for Congress will lie mainly between Mr. ELA, the present incumbent, NATHANIEL GORDON, of Exeter, and SAMUEL M. WHEELER, of Dover, with the chances in favor of the last-named.

The Charleston News is desirous that Northern Republicans should understand that "the straightforward opposition of a true Southern man is far less dangerous to them than the oily rascality of the whited sepulchres who now profess to represent the intelligence and wealth of the South."

The Hartford Post has been thinking over the President's suggestions respecting Canada, and has come to this conclusion: "The manly and sensible way to settle the fishery difficulty is to have our fishermen protected by our navy, and if British vessels interrupt them 'fight it out on that line.' That would mean business, and would not be making mouths at anybody's sister."

The official majorities for the Democratic candidates for Congress in Kentucky are as follows: First District, EDWARD CROSSLAND, 3,545; Second District, H. D. MCHENRY, 2,723; Third District, JOSEPH H. LEWIS, 1,865; Fourth District, W. B. ROWE, 5,483; Fifth District, BOYD WINCHESTER, 5,183; Sixth District, W. E. ARTHUR, 4,835; Seventh District, JAMES B. BECK, 3,396; Eighth District, GEORGE M. ADAMS, 18; Ninth District, JOHN M. RICE, 3,255. Total vote—Democratic, 89,447; Republican, 57,751. Democratic majority, 31,696.

Leading Pennsylvania Democrats consulted with their State Committee in Altoona, last week, and the Chairman of the Committee was authorized to call a State Convention at such time as he should deem expedient, between the 4th of March and the 1st of May, to nominate candidates for Auditor-General, Surveyor-General, and delegates at large to the proposed Constitutional Convention. There was a general and free interchange of opinions, and it was agreed that the time has come for the Democracy to take an advanced position in accord with the progress of events.

The time for the Pennsylvania Republican State Convention is fixed for the 10th of March but a correspondent of the Philadelphia Telegraph says it was determined upon early last Summer, when the "ring" operators hoped to defeat constitutional reform. Now, however, all parties concede that a Convention will be called to revise the Constitution, and the Democrats have given their Chairman a discretionary period of two months that they may await legislative action on the reform movement should differences as to details delay the passage of the Convention bill.

Gen. SCHENCK has at length authorized a contest in his name for the seat in the next Congress as Representative of the Third District of Ohio, for the especial purpose of vindicating the right of the maimed veterans in the Soldiers' Home to vote. In his letter he says: "I cannot withhold the use of my name when required thus to test the question of their sacred and well-earned right. Indeed, it is a not matter only concerning myself personally; and, as you are aware, any elector may exercise the privilege of making such a contest; so I shall leave it with my Republican friends in the district to take, in my name, the proper steps, and to collect and present the necessary proofs for the assertion of their right to be presented according to the will of a lawful majority."

FORTY-FIRST CONGRESS.

THIRD SESSION.

SENATE....WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 8.

ASSESSMENT OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYES.

A bill was introduced, today, by Mr. WILSON, of Massachusetts, to prevent assessments of money upon Government employes for political and other purposes.

This bill provides that it shall be unlawful for any head of a Department, Collector of Customs or Internal Revenue, or other Government officer, to receive or knowingly fail to prohibit any such assessment; and any employe paying such assessment shall be dismissed from office, and be subject to a fine not exceeding $1,000. The bill also provides the following additional to the oath now subscribed to: "And that I have not during the same time paid, or promised to pay, any assessment or involuntary contribution for political or other purposes." It also forbids, under the same penalties, any importer, broker, agent or other person from making to any Government official or employe, or member of his family, directly or indirectly, any present, gratuity, reward or compensation for any services promised or rendered in connection with the duties of his office.

OTHER BILLS INTRODUCED.

Other bills were introduced and laid on the table, as follows:

By Mr. NYE, of Nevada—To create a fund to be known as the Mineral Land Fund, and for other purposes.

By Mr. ROSS, of Kansas—A joint resolution relating to the Miami Indian Reservation in Kansas.

By Mr. POMEROY, of Kansas—Amendatory of the Pre-emption laws, allowing joint entries upon public lands by continuous proprietors; also a joint resolution proposing a constitutional amendment relating to Female Suffrage.

By Mr. ABBOTT, of North Carolina—To establish the Western District of North Carolina.

By Mr. MORTON, of Indiana—Providing that all elections for President, Vice-President and members of Congress, shall be by ballot. [Mr. MORTON in reply to Mr. TRUMBULL, of Illinois, explained that the bill was intended to apply to Kentucky, and perhaps, one or two other other States, where the elections were viva voce, and not by ballot.]

RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. SUMNER'S resolution, calling for information concerning colored schools in Washington and Georgetown, was adopted.

Mr. ROSS submitted a resolution reciting the allegations of fraud now being perpetrated in the disposal of lands in the Miami Indian Reservation in Kansas, and directing an inquiry by the Committee on Indian Affairs whether it is not advisable to direct a suspension of the issuance of patents, or other evidence of title, until such action may be taken for their disposal as is contemplated by the terms of the treaty of 1854 with the said Miami Indians. Laid over.

MEMORIALS.

Mr. SHERMAN, of Ohio, presented a memorial of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, praying for such an amendment to the resolution authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Ohio River, between Cincinnati and Newport, as will prevent the completion of the bridge upon the present plan, and that it may be constructed at a greater elevation, in order that the draw may be dispensed with. Referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. HARLAN, of Iowa, submitted resolutions of the Dubuque Board of Trade in favor of the construction of the so-called Northern Branch of the Pacific Railroad westward from the Missouri River, and a grant of public lands in aid thereof.

Mr. ABBOTT, of North Carolina, presented memorials for an appropriation for public buildings at Wilmington, N. C.

By Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania—To reduce the internal taxes; providing that no duty shall be imposed upon any succession which was vested, in possession or expectancy, prior to the passage of the Internal Revenue bill of July 13, 1866; but no reclamation to be allowed when any such duty has been already paid.

DISPOSITION OF OLD MEASURES.

REVISION OF THE POSTAL LAWS.

This business being completed, the House resumed consideration of the bill to revise and consolidate the Postal laws.

Abolition of the Franking Privilege.

The pending question was the amendment offered by Mr. FARNSWORTH, of Illinois, just before the adjournment yesterday, abolishing the franking privilege.

Mr. POTTER, of New-York, advocated the amendment as one which would put a stop to the existing abuses of the franking privilege, without preventing the publication of official documents, as would be the case if the law passed by the House at the last session became a law. If was the same propositon as he had offered in the form of a bill last session.

Mr. VAN WYCK, of New-York, opposed the amendment as retaining the franking privilege in its most objectionable feature—the publication of documents of no general interest, and the encumbering of the mails with them, and as taking out of the Treasury $66,000 each session to be paid to the members for their own private correspondence.

Mr. MAYNARD, of Tennessee, opposed the abolition of the franking privilege, declaring it his belief that it would not save a dollar to the public treasury, as the same amount would be paid to the mail contractors, whether the mails contained franked matter or not

CUBAN AFFAIRS.

The Past of the Island—The Choice of De Rodas—The Slavery Question—De Rodas' Downfall—The War—The Casin Espanol.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HAVANA, Saturday, Dec. 3, 1870.

The duplicity of Spanish statesmen and the vile conduct of the so-called Liberal faction of that party, which has governed Spain for the past two years, has come to light, not once, but very often since they have been in power, and if corruption or any other disreputable attribute of those which the Ministers of the Spanish realm have generally been accused of, are taken in consideration, the fact is self-evident that PRIM, MORET & Co. are a bigger set of rogues than NARVAEZ or MARFORI ever could have been. Not in vain did the old party clamor that the governing power in this Island be distinctively divided between a civil and a military leader, each one to perform the functions only pertaining to their respective portfolios. But let nobody suppose that this was done in order to lessen the power of the so-called military satraps; not in the least. It was simply the fear that by chance some military man might reach the position of a Captain-General of Cuba, who, proud of his soldierly qualities and reputation, would act honest and fearless, thwart the machinations of the rulers and favorites of a Court, and refuse to act as the cat's-paw and fence of a lot of ambitious and avaricious politicians. The old régime, under the gay and festive MARFORI, set up a horrid groan of agony and woe when LERSUNDI, during his first term, refused to obey their behests, and the consequence was that LERSUNDI was recalled. The revolution of September, 1868, resulting in the downfall of Queen ISABELLA is too fresh in the memory of all to require recapitulation, and the liberal offers of the so-called Liberal Government were so contrary to what the Spanish people had been accustomed to that the Conservatives shook their heads in wonder, Republicans became Socialists, and those well acquainted with Spain, its people, traditions and customs, indulged in a fantastic mental arithmetic, calculating how long it would take before John had bought a palace and Robert laid up a handsome reserve in the three per cent., and according to the length of time they reached in their minds, that length was given as the duration of the new régime. The breaking out of the Cuban revolution was for a time the death-blow to the avaricious and hungry politicians of the higher class in Spain, but after the first fright was over, matters were so arranged as to bring the old system into use again by slow, but sure methods. The old practice of telling the people one thing and doing another, of publishing a law and never inforcing it, or of hampering it with so many additions and annoying conditions, that even the bravest would not dare to take advantage of it, were again put in practice. Ostensibly a liberal Government and free of guile, it was simply the same old cloth, only turned inside out; a new set of politicians had sprung up to eat some of the pap which their predecessors had grown fat on, and the old Spanish saying, "Et mismo perro con otro collar," (the same dog with a new collar,) was again verified in this instance.

THE CHOICE OF DE RODAS.

But the Ministers and lobbyists made a grand mistake in selecting CABALLERO DE RODAS as Captain-General of Cuba. With a military reputation second to none in Spain, as the hero of the hour after repressing the republican manifestations of Jerez and Cadiz, with the necessity of sending a determined man to Cuba, where affairs were then in a very critical condition for the Spaniards, there was no other alternative for the knowing politicians than to agree to his appointment, they flattering themselves at the same time with the idea that they had got rid of a powerful enemy at home, whose weight and personal influence might at any time turn the tables against them. Everything worked smoothly for a few months, but the moment RODAS got the "hang" of affairs here, he told the Madrid Government plainly that he was Captain-General of Cuba; that he knew what the people wanted, and that he would act in accordance. Several pets of the Ministry who came to Cuba with an appointment to some lucrative position, and whose only qualification consisted in their ability to draw their salaries regularly, were sent back, and after awhile the Government allowed Gen. RODAS to have his own way for a time.

THE SLAVERY QUESTION.

But that curse of humanity, the slavery question, was the cheval de bataille. Every slaveholder in Cuba, with rare exceptions, moved heaven and earth in order to retard any and all action which might possibly affect their interests. Emissaries and hundreds of thousands of dollars were sent from Cuba to Spain, all for the purpose of filling the pockets of the Cuban and Spanish slave-owners, and preventing the colored race from attaining any privileges. The Government in Spain, bound by its programme and professions, and its promises to other Governments, could not possibly do anything openly to favor the slave-owners, who were in reality the governing power. Their gold and influence was everywhere. The Emancipation proclamation was delayed from day to day until the Ministers at last made up their minds to free the infirm over sixty years of age, and all infants born after the passage of the act. I am particular in stating the infirm over sixty, as a hearty and healthy negro could never reach that age. The readiness and anxiety of RODAS to put this decree into force was apparent, and basing his action on the old census, he shocked the fine sensibilities (I mean the pockets) of the slave-holding crew. The screws were put on tighter at Madrid, while, in the mean time, Gen. RODAS unconditionally freed ten out of the thirteen thousand negro emancipados in charge of the Government. He is now freeing the remainder. Slavedom stood aghast! The idea of paying a salary of from $10 to $25 per month to a negro who, hitherto, had only received $4 monthly! CALVO and others, who represent slavedom in Madrid, complained bitterly of this cruel injustice to their constituents, and RODAS was "hauled over the coals." But he refused to serve as a catspaw for men who wrote officially, "free the negroes and carry out the accompanying law," but who in private wrote him, "Civilization and the eyes of the world compel us to issue laws; if you don't carry them out, we won't blame you; and you need not be in a hurry to act on these laws, as we would rather see you disobey us than bring down upon us the wrath of the wealthy slave-owners, and prevent us from keeping on good terms with them." But another fear overruled the Ministers for a short while.

POSITION OF RODAS.

They knew the violent and firm temper of RODAS, and his determination of not stopping to look at the consequences when roused. They feared that in the event of their electing a King of their own making, and if by accident RODAS should then be resentfully inclined, he would fail to proclaim the fact in Cuba, and perhaps do something which they had not counted upon. RODAS knew this, and felt hurt. He remarked to a friend, "Do they think that I am like them—a politician who can be bribed by money, a decoration or a position? These rogues are not accustomed to deal with honest men, however, and they ought to be forgiven, as they know no better." RODAS proclaimed AMADEO in due style, just as he would have proclaimed the King of Dahomy or WILLIAM M. TWEED. The Spanish camarilla sent him a telegram asking him to delay his anti-slavery practices. RODAS, however, only issued new papers of freedom, but seeing that his position had become very unpleasant, he sent a peremptory telegram to Madrid on Tuesday morning, stating that his resignation was to be accepted before forty-eight hours. On Tuesday, at noon, the answer came that his resignation would be accepted, and that Gen. VALMASEDA would take charge temporarily. The written order will reach here about the 18th, so that RODAS will leave here about the 20th. His departure will be regretted by all men who love honesty, and by every colored man and woman in the island, who have lost the only protector they ever had. Even the so-called republican Cubans were slave-holders, and they were not, as a rule, among those who treated their slaves the best.

RODAS' SUCCESSOR.

The successor of Gen. RODAS is the well-known Gen. VALMASEDA. Why he is so well known, nobody can exactly tell. He was one of the first who commanded the Spanish troops when the insurrection broke out, and has since been in the field—that is to say, he commanded the troops who were in the field, having gone out himself several times. VALMASEDA is the idol of the volunteers, a stanch adherent of the fallen dynasty, and very pious. He knows the island and its people well, but is very easily led by those in whom he confides, and he is not the man who ought to have charge of Cuba at the present day, if the Spaniards intend to restore peace to it once more.

THE WAR.

Excepting the capture and surrender of several prominent personages among the insurgents, but few items of interest present themselves. The reinforcements which have already arrived from Spain and those now at sea, are sent to the interior as fast as they can be armed and equipped. The only engagement of any importance was that of Col. MARIN, in the Central Department, who killed, according to his statement, fifty-two insurgents and captured Mr. CRISTOBAL MENDOZA, who was formerly the Cuban Secretary of Foreign Affairs. Previous to the war Mr. MENDOZA held a position on the staff of the Havana Siglo, and was universally respected for his talent and gentlemanly qualities. The insurgent leader, QUINTILO VILLAREAL, was killed near Holguin, his father, ANTONIO, having been killed some months ago. Col. GERMAN BARNIOS, the Chief of Staff of the Cuban Gen. ADOLFO CAVADA, was also captured and executed at Cienfuegos; he was related to many families in Cienfuegos, and his death caused much excitement there. A number of contrite insurgents surrendered in the five villas, among them Col. GERMAN CABRERA, who commanded the party of JESUS DEL SOL, since the latter's illness.

THE CASINO ESPANOL.

The Casino Espanol, the Spanish political club, has at length finished the counting of about seven hundred votes, a number of gentlemen being engaged in that laudable task for over a week. The ticket elected is a curious mixture of ultras, so-called conservatives, Spanish-thinking Cubans, and newspaper men. The list of names elected to serve as an executive committee reminds me forcibly of BARNUM's happy family. To those who know Havana politicians, the conglomeration of such persons as J. M. Villergas, J. F. Tabernilla, Pedro Sotolongo, Pablo Dardet, Segundo Rigal, his Excellency, Ramon Herrera, Francisco Calderon, and J. M. Arendaño, can only appear supremely ridiculous. Birds who are not of one feather sometimes do flock together. QUASIMODO.

WOMEN IN UNIVERSITIES.

The Effect of Their Admission to the University of Michigan—What the Acting President Says.

Acting President FRIEZE, of the Michigan State University, has published in pamphlet form his annual report of the condition and work of the University for the academic year 1869-70. From it we quote the following discussion of the "woman question":

The poverty of the University has begun to be more painfully apparent since the adoption of the resolution by which the institution was thrown open to women. The question of the admission of women to the privileges of the University has been for many years earnestly discussed both by the citizens and the Legislature of the State, and by the authorities of the University. It was reasonable that an innovation upon traditional customs, seeming to involve grave consequences, and opposed to the prejudices, if not to the judgments, of a large portion of college graduates and college educators, should not be made until ample time had been given for the forming of an intelligent public opinion, and until this opinion had been distinctly and authoritatively expressed. Your honorable Board, believing that the will of the people on this question had been at length clearly ascertained and correctly represented by the legislative body, and that thus the period for deciding it had arrived, announced by resolution at your meeting in January of this year, "that the Board of Regents recognize the right of every resident of Michigan to the enjoyment of the privileges afforded by the University, and that no rule exists in any of the University statutes for the exclusion of any person from the University who possesses the requisite literary qualifications;" a resolution which virtually declares that all departments and courses of study in this institution are to be henceforth equally accessible to both sexes.

Many will think this a bold step, many will think it hazardous; but no one who considers the relations of this University to the State and community, will deny its entire justice. The generous system of education to which our State is committed necessarily pledges to its daughters, as well as to its sons, the highest as well as the most elementary education, free of charge. We have already ceased to fear the dangers which were apprehended from this action, and which constituted the chief argument against it—the loss of reputation and caste among universities, the decline of scholarship and the corruption of morals. But the action is destined to give us anxiety in quite another direction. It increases at once our perplexity, already great, in regard to buildings, recitation-rooms and officers of instruction. We have already more young men than we can well provide for. What shall we do with the young women now added to the number? The one building to which most of the exercises of the Literary Department are confined, is already crowded to excess. Any one who should witness the difficulty the large classes of this department find in moving along the narrow "gang-ways," and up and down the narrow stair-cases of this building, a movement which must take place at almost every hour of the day, would hesitate to expose young ladies to all this embarrassment and discomfort. I need not say that they will be received by all members of the institution, both faculties and students, with the utmost courtesy and consideration; but every one must see that they will labor under serious disadvantages, and greatly increase the present embarrassments of the institution, until more suitable and more adequate accommodations can be provided; nor can the wisdom of this important measure be fairly tested until the new necessities which it creates are fully met. The University has long needed more buildings, apartments, and equipments to meet existing wants. Your decision in favor of the admission of women has made these wants still more immediate and imperative. You have believed it a duty to comply with the request of the Legislature, urged upon you by repeated majorities in both Houses, and undoubtedly reflecting the will of the people. You can now, in all fairness, ask the Legislature to furnish you with the buildings necessary to make their request effectual, and to carry out their wishes.

Remarkable Murder Trial—A Woman Who Shot Her Betrayer Discharged by the Judge.

From the Columbus, Ohio, Statesman, Dec. 5.

Last week Ironton, Lawrence County, enjoyed the luxury of a highly-sensational murder trial. It was the old story of a woman's ruin and a woman's revenge by the killing of the seducer. The result of the trial was strictly in accordance with that higher law of public sentiment which justifies the taking of human life as a recompense for the betrayal of feminine virtue. The law is not laid down in the books, but it is as fully recognized as any principle of the civil or criminal code. In the Ironton case, in addition, this manner of homicide seems to have achieved a recognition from the Bench not hitherto awarded it.

There were two indictments against a brother and sister—JOHN and ELIZABETH MCQUIGG—for the murder of PRESLEY BARKER. BARKER had seduced Miss MCQUIGG and refused to make reparation by marrying her. The brother—so the theory of the defense run—resolved to intimidate BARKER into a marriage, and arranged for an interview between him and the young lady. MCQUIGG was present at the meeting, armed with a pistol, to be used, as he claims, in terrifying BARKER into the marriage. At the interview, and after the sister had asked BARKER to fulfill his promise of marriage, and he again declined to do so, she suddenly drew a pistol and fired, killing her deceiver. She was about to fire again, when her brother interfered, and the ball went wide of its mark. It was shown to the satisfaction of the jury that MCQUIGG did not know that his sister was in possession of the pistol. The case went to the jury on Thursday last, and, after an absence of three hours and a half, they brought in a verdict of "not guilty." The verdict was received with great enthusiasm by the crowd in the Court-house. The prisoner fainted, and it was some time before he recovered. The fact being established that the defendant did not know of his sister having the pistol with which she fired the fatal shot, justifies the verdict.

On Friday, the day following the conclusion of this trial, the case against the sister, ELIZABETH MCQUIGG, was called up. Judge WRIGHT, the presiding Judge, in view of the verdict in the other case, requested the Prosecuting Attorney to enter a nolle. The Judge said if the jury would not convict JOHN MCQUIGG, they certainly would not convict the sister. The Prosecutor declined to assume any such responsibility. The Court then assumed the responsibility, and directed a nolle prosequi to be entered in the case of ELIZABETH MCQUIGG, and she was discharged from custody.

THE FOX WILL CASE.

Conclusion of the Argument Yesterday—The Legal Points Presented by Senator Hardenburg.

The argument in the matter of the contested will of CHARLES FOX, deceased, which was reported at length exclusively in these columns yesterday, was concluded yesterday before Hon. R. C. HUTCHINGS, Surrogate. The session was mainly taken up with the presentation of the case, on the part of the contestants, by Senator HARDENBURG, in reply to the argument of Mr. PIERREPONT the day before, and on the point as to the legal right of the Government to accept a devise, made as directed by the terms of the will. The counsel spoke for nearly two hours, ably reviewing the questions involved, and citing authorities to sustain his position. When he had concluded Mr. PIERREPONT stated that he should prepare a brief résumé of his own points, in order to aid the Surrogate in forming his opinion. Judge HUTCHINGS took the papers in the case, reserving his decision. The following is a review of the proceedings:

Mr. HARDENBURG, in summing up the case on behalf of the contestants, spoke of its great importance and the issues involved in it. He proposed to argue that this testator had no power or right to convey this real estate in the form in which he attempted to convey it, and that if he had, beyond all question, doubt, it entailed a breach upon the Government of the United States. The issues assumed partly a political form, and affected the rights of American citizens generally. He proceeded to show that the people of the State of New-York were a sovereign power, not through the instrumentality of the United States, but through a treaty of peace concluded with Great Britain. She had certain territorial limits over which she exercised supreme control, subject only to the higher authority vested in the General Government. He took it that the questions to be decided by this bill were to be governed only by the law of the State of New-York. If FOX had any right to devise his property at all he got it from the sovereign power of this State, and if that law conferred upon him no such power he had no authority in the matter, and the will of necessity was void in respect to the real estate. He claimed that he had no such power; that the law did not confer on any one the right to transfer by devise dominion over any portion of its territory. It was not until the statute of HENRY VIII. that any man had the right to transfer after his death or make any such disposition of his property, and by the provisions of that statute was the legality of the devise to be determined. He combated the argument of Mr. PIERREPONT that the Government of the United States could take property, and said that not a single fact had been adduced to support the proposition. The question here was not so much whether or not that body politic can take, but the real question was whether FOX had the right to devise by will. He maintained that this question was to be judged by the laws of this State, and that the deceased had no right to dispose of his property except under that statute, namely, to "persons or corporations authorized to take." If this man died, leaving his estate to the Empire of Great Britain, every citizen would oppose it as illegal, and it would give an outsider a jurisdiction within this territory. He asserted such a grant was against the policy of the State to devise property to any foreign potentate, it was against its policy to devise it to the States of Jersey and Connecticut, and the same argument was tenable in reference to the Government of the United States. He cited from the statute of wills giving individuals the power to bequeath their property, but there was no restriction prohibiting the giving of real estate to an alien, even though residing in the country. To be valid it should be given to a "person, a corporation expressly authorized to take it," and that authority, he said, was never given by this State to the United States. Then where was the power of FOX to dispose of an acre of soil in New-York, except he got it under that statute, which only gave him the power to devise it to a corporation expressly authorized to receive it? Wipe out the statute of HENRY VIII., with its re-enactments on this side, and where was the power of any man to devise his land? He asserted in reply to Mr. PIERREPONT's argument, that the Government of the United States was as foreign to that of the State of New-York as the Government of France. Mr. PIERREPONT stated that the Federal Government could take and sell land; he denied it, and asked could it dispose of it to Great Britain? This was a sovereign State, and no power but that emanating from itself could disturb any of its territory. If this principle were sustained, he asserted, it would virtually deprive every citizen in New-York of his rights, destroy their allegiance to this Government, and render the punishment for crime an impossibility. He claimed that the Government had failed to show they had any power to take land, and that no such power was given in the statute. Assuming, however, that they had that power, he contended, under this devise, it was clearly given in trust. It was not necessary that it should be so stated, but the terms of the will distinctly set forth that the money was to be devoted to a particular purpose, the payment of the debt incurred by the war, and nothing else. Evidently it was not the intention of the deceased to give his property to the Government of the United States or he would have mentioned it, but he expressly stipulated that it was to be employed for a certain object, and the inference of trust was palpable. He quoted "HILL on Trustee" in support of his argument, and with a repetition of these two points closed the case on the part of the contestants.

Commissioners of Emigration—The Lunatic Asylum at Ward's Island.

The regular meeting of the Commissioners of Emigration, was held yesterday afternoon at Castle Garden, RICHARD O'GORMAN, Esq., President, in the chair. The Building Committee reported in favor of adopting the pavilion style of edifice on Ward's Island, for the accommodation of those patients afflicted with a mild form of insanity. The report was adopted.

The Superintendent was directed to prepare the annual report for presentation to the Legislature, and the various committees were requested to have their reports ready at the next meeting of the Board.

On motion of Commissioner NICOLSON it was resolved that the Medical Department at Ward's Island send to the Superintendent a report of the disabled and infirm emigrants on that island who are desirous of being sent back to their homes; also those who wish to be transported inland to their friends—the object being to reduce the expenses of keeping emigrants on the island during the Winter. On motion of Commissioner LYNCH it was resolved that a committee, consisting of Commissioners LYNCH, FREAR and SCHAACK, be appointed to equalize the salaries of the employes in the department. Commissioner WALLACH moved that the agent of the Pennsylvania Central Road in Castle Garden be directed to exchange the ticket orders for his road for the tickets of any other road over which the emigrant might wish to travel, and that this transfer be made inside of Castle Garden. It was adopted.

Commissioner WALLACH moved that the general agents of the roads sending emigrants give them checks, stating the number of pieces of baggage checked. The President said that in the matter of missing baggage he was of the opinion that the agents should state on the stump of the ticket the number of pieces belonging to each passenger, to that it could be traced. The subject was referred to the Castle Garden Committee.

Commissioner HART reported that in the case of the arrest of persons, representing themselves to be officers, for frauds on emigrants on the Hudson River Road, the examination had been set down for Saturday.

It was reported that Mr. AUGUST SCHWAB, of OELRICHS & Co.'s, had been appointed arbitrator in the matter of the exchange of land between the Commissioners of Emigration and the Commissioners of Charities and Correction.

On motion of Commissioner WALLACH, Dr. STIRLING was appointed physician at Castle Garden and Rev. C. WEDON Chaplain at Ward's Island. The appointment of Dr. STIRLING displaces Dr. CAMMERRER, who has held the position for the last sixteen years.

The Castle Garden Committee was directed to appoint an assistant physician to the Garden, at a salary to be hereafter fixed.

The statistics for the past two weeks are as follows: Number of passengers to Dec. 1, 203,806; since to Dec. 8, 2,895—total, 206,701; number not reported on manifest, 251,162. Balance in bank Jan. 1, 1870, $79,371 66; received since, $592,856 06. Disbursements to Nov. 24, $637,386 34; current expenses to date, $33,253 55. Balance with City Chamberlain, $1,687 83.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

The great attraction at the Exchange yesterday (Dec. 8) was the proposed sale by V. K. STEVENSON, SON & Co., B. P. FAIRCHILD, auctioneer, of the block of ground on Fifth-avenue, opposite Central Park, bounded by the avenue named, Madison-avenue, Seventy-eighth and Seventy-ninth streets, and comprising thirty-four most desirable building lots. The attendance of those interested in real estate was large, and great interest was manifested as to the result of the day's transaction. This result, unfortunately for the market, was not marked by the success hoped for or expected. The property was first offered entire at an upset price of $800,000, but no bid was received above these figures. The sale of lots singly was then attempted, and the one located on the north-west corner of Madison-avenue and Seventy-eighth-street was put up. Started at $10,000, it was finally struck off to JOHN EMMONS for $15,200—a bona fide sale. This price was so much below the estimated value of the lot that after a brief consultation between the owner of the property, Mr. DOUGLASS, and the auctioneers, it was deemed judicious to discontinue the sale, in order that no misunderstanding might arise, as the firm conducting the auction had publicly stated that any lot offered was to be sold without reserve, to the highest bidder. This right had been reserved in the published notices of the sale, and accordingly no additional lots were disposed of. That it was deemed necessary to take the step above referred to, and to abandon a project so widely noticed, is to be regretted, for every futile attempt to dispose of really first-class property cannot fail to exercise a depressing influence upon the market, and to inspire distrust as to the present values placed upon property. Investors must bid more actively at auction sales if they desire to keep up existing prices. That more of the lots were not offered created some disappointment, and after the sale was closed $50,000 was publicly bid by Mr. CHAS. L. CORNISH, for the lot on the south-east corner of Fifth-avenue and Seventy-ninth-street. The eight lots fronting on Fifth-avenue, between Seventy-eighth and Seventy-ninth streets, and forming the front of the block, it was stated, are held by no an inquiry, are valued by the owner at $550,000.

The only other transaction effected at the Exchange was made by Col. JAMES M. MILLER, who, at a Supreme Court sale in foreclosure, under the direction of RICHARD C. BEAMISH, Esq., referee, disposed of a house and lot located on One Hundred and Twenty-eighth-street, near Second-avenue. The premises were sold subject to a mortgage of $3,500 and one year's interest on the same, and brought over and above this amount, $4,400. The buyer was J. C. STURTEVANT. No other business was transacted at the Real Estate Rooms.

The sale at Flatbush, L. I., under the direction of DINGEE, KETCHAM & Co., which took place yesterday on the ground, and at which 214 building lots were offered, was comparatively well attended, about sixty persons being present. The transaction, however, was not particularly successful, although a number of the lots were nominally sold. Nine lots located on the north side of the road to Rockaway Beach, near Bedford-avenue, each 25 by about 70 feet, really sold to J. TIERNAY at $205 each. One hundred other lots, all situated between Bedford and Clinton avenues, were knocked down to Mr. OAKLEY and A. EMANUEL, at prices varying from $300 to $590 apiece. The lateness of the season for an out-of-door sale, without doubt affected the success which might otherwise have attended this transaction.

The only sale advertised to take place at the Exchange today, is a legal one by V. K. STEVENSON, SON & Co., at which the leasehold property, consisting of a three-story frame house and lot on the east side of Fifth-avenue, between One Hundred and Ninth and One Hundred and Tenth streets, will be disposed of.

Messrs. WINANS, SANDS & GARRETTSON, real estate brokers, No. 91 Cedar-street, have recently effected the following important, private transactions in City and country property. Attention was called to the recorded transfer of the Bank and West street premises, in the TIMES of Monday, and the particulars will be found in the report below:

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 25, 1870.
TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:
By an act of the General Assembly of the State of Georgia, approved Oct. 24, 1870, authority is given to the Governor to lease the Western and Atlantic Railroad, the property of the State, together with all of its houses, workshops, depots, rolling stock and appurtenances of every character, for the term of twenty years, upon certain terms, and subject to certain restrictions therein named, to-wit:
The monthly rental shall not be less than twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000) payable monthly. The lessees shall give a bond for the sum of eight millions of dollars ($8,000,000) to securing the prompt payment of the amount of rental agreed upon, and for the return of the road and its appurtenances at the expiration of the lease, or on the termination or forfeiture thereof, in as good condition as at the time of leasing, five millions ($5,000,000) of which security shall be within this state, and the balance, if out of the State, shall be upon real estate or railroad property. The lessees to be worth over and above their indebtedness, at least five hundred thousand dollars ($500,000.)
The Legislature reserves to itself the right, from time to time, to examine into the affairs of the lessees, and to require that the amount of security above recited shall be maintained unimpaired.
The lessees shall not be less than seven in number, a majority of whom shall have been for five years bona fide residents of this State, and shall represent a majority of the whole interest in the lease. No railroad or express company, or any combination of them, shall, in any event, become the lessees, but they may become sureties on the bonds of the lessees. The lessees shall not charge a higher rate for local freights over said road than the average rate charged by the Georgia Railroad and Banking Company, the Central Railroad and Banking Company, and the Macon and Western Railroad Company, for like local freights over said roads, and the said lessees shall have the same rights, exemptions, privileges, immunities and guarantees, except the establishment of banks, and shall be subject to the same liabilities, disabilities, and public burdens of said railroad companies last mentioned. The faith of the State is pledged to redeem all mortgage bonds and coupons now resting on the State Road as they fall due, and to save the lessees harmless against all such bonds and coupons.
The lessees are by this act constituted a body corporate and politic for the term of twenty years, under the name and style of the Western and Atlantic Railroad Company, having such powers, liabilities and immunities as are usual with railroad companies, and not in conflict with the Constitution and Laws of the United States, or of the State of Georgia; but they will not be allowed to make or permit any discrimination in favor of or against any other road or persons having business connections with the said Western and Atlantic Railroad.
For the purpose of carrying out this act, proposals will be received until and including the 25th day of December next, and must be addressed "to the Governor of the State of Georgia, at Atlanta," and marked on the wrapper, "Proposals for the lease of the Western and Atlantic Railroad, in accordance with an Act approved October 24, 1870." The proposals must state in full the names and residence of the parties uniting to make proposition, the amount that each of the parties therein named are worth over and above their debts and liabilities, together with a full description of the character of the security which will be offered to complete the bond.
The property to be leased is a single-track railroad, 138 miles in length, with full and complete equipment of shops, depots, turn-outs, sidelings, engines, cars, &c., &c., &c., now in successful operation between the cities of Atlanta, in Georgia, and Chattanooga, in Tennessee. At Chattanooga the line is in direct rail connection with the Memphis and Charleston, Nashville and Chattanooga, Chattanooga and New-Orleans, East Tennessee and Georgia, and the Chattanooga and Cincinnati, (now in progress of construction,) railroads, and at Atlanta with the Atlanta and Montgomery, Atlanta and Charleston, Atlanta and Savannah, and the Atlanta and Gulf lines of road, being the only railroad connection between the system of railways centering at Chattanooga and at Atlanta.
Copies of "An act to authorize the lease of the Western and Atlantic Railroad, and for other purposes therein mentioned," approved Oct. 24, 1870, can be had upon application at the Executive office.
RUFUS B. BULLOCK.
By the Governor:
ROBERT H. ATKINSON, Executive Secretary.

POLITICAL REMINISCENCES.

The Crisis of 1841—How the Condemnation of Mr. Everett's Nomination to the English Mission was Secured—A Letter from Hon. Christopher Morgan.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Gen. SCHOULLER, who was for many years an able Whig editor at Boston and Cincinnati, is contributing interesting political reminiscences to the Boston Journal. His letters go back to the Presidential campaign of 1844, and contain graphic sketches of the proceedings of Conventions and the characters of distinguished public men through that and several succeeding political conflicts. In a recent letter Gen. SCHOULLER gives an account of a visit made by himself in company with Mr. WEED to Senator MOREHEAD, at his residence in Covington, Ky., in 1854. During that visit the subject of Hon. EDWARD EVERETT'S nomination as Minister to England was introduced. In speaking of the effort then made to reject Mr. EVERETT, Gen. SCHOULLER says:

"Senator MOREHEAD said that the ablest speech against the confirmation was made by Senator KING, of Alabama, who read a letter addressed by Mr. EVERETT, when a candidate for Governor, to the Free-Soilers of Massachusetts. Mr. KING closed his speech as follows: 'I would tell you, Mr. President, that if this gentleman, holding views so opposite to the interests of the South and so destructive to its institutions, is appointed, this Union must and will be dissolved.'

Mr. CLAY arose in his place, and pointing his long arm and fore-finger at Mr. KING, said in a loud and firm voice: 'And I tell you, Mr. President, that if a gentleman so pre-eminently qualified for the post of Minister, should be rejected by the Senate, and for reasons given by the Senator from Alabama, that this Union is dissolved already.' He closed by saying, all the arguments brought against Mr. EVERETT verged to one centre, which was that Mr. EVERETT was opposed on principle to the system of Southern slavery. So is the whole of New-England. So are many in the South. So am I, although a holder of slaves."

Now, it strikes me that an incident preceding, connected with and bearing upon the debate just quoted, should be made known. The Summer session of Congress in 1841 was alike eventful and exciting. Measures of vast national importance were pending. Webster, Clay, Silas Wright, Mangam, Southard, Crittenden, Benton, Calhoun, Preston, W. R. King, &c., were in the Senate. George Evans, Robert C. Winthrop, John Quincy Adams, Truman Smith, Ogden Hoffman, John C. Clark, Francis Granger, Millard Fillmore, Daniel D. Barnard, John Sargent, Henry A. Wise, Edward Stanley, Lewis Williams, John Bell, &c., in the House of Representatives. President HARRISON had been succeeded by Vice-President TYLER, whose then unpronounced course and policy awakened intense solicitude both in Congress and throughout the country. That crisis in our affairs brought many prominent politicians to Washington, and among them the editor of the Albany Evening Journal. Mr. WEED passed much of his leisure time at my room on Pennsylvania-avenue. One evening during our walk on Capitol Hill, we called on Senator MOREHEAD, of Kentucky, with whom we found Senator MANGAM, of North Carolina, where, with good cigars, rare Bourbon, and spirited conversation, we passed an agreeable evening. Finally, just before the small hours, we took our leave. Senator MOREHEAD followed us to the door, and said that he had desired all the evening to make a communication to us, but had been restrained by the circumstance that it related to a question pending in Executive Session of the Senate. Impressed, however, as he was, with the knowledge that a great wrong was to be done, and feeling that he could confide in our discretion, he had determined to "free his mind." He then informed us that the Senate had been canvassed, and that Mr. EVERETT'S nomination as Minister to England would be rejected on account of his abolition sentiments. He said that he deprecated such a result as unjust to Mr. EVERETT, but still more because it would occasion injurious agitation throughout the country. He said that Mr. CLAY, though opposed to the movement, only intended to give a silent vote for Mr. EVERETT. We expressed surprise that a majority of the Senate could be induced to commit an act of such reckless injustice, and after a little further conversation, he invited us back, and informed Mr. MANGAM that he had confided a Senate secret to us. The latter gentleman then joined in the conversation, confirming Mr. MOREHEAD'S assurance that Mr. EVERETT'S rejection was inevitable. He added that the leading Southern Senators, having decided to make the issue, most of the Democratic Senators from Northern States would be constrained to go with them, to which, with emphatic earnestness, Mr. WEED replied: "This great danger must be avoided. The effect of Mr. EVERETT'S rejection for such a cause would arouse a feeling of popular indignation throughout the whole country." The Senators replied that if we could do anything to avert this evil, they would rejoice heartily, but that they had no power and but little hope. As we proceeded down the avenue, Mr. WEED repeated and reiterated, "This must be stopped—the country can't afford the agitation." Arriving at my room, I inquired how Mr. WEED proposed to "stop it?" He replied: "By appealing to the people through the Press," adding, "if the responses get here in season Senators will recover their senses." He then wrote a brief letter to the Baltimore Patriot, announcing the fact that Mr. EVERETT was to be rejected as Minister to England on account of his alleged abolition sentiments, and appealing earnestly to the people to raise their voices against it. He then indicated the names of papers in Wilmington, Philadelphia, Harrisburg, Cincinnati, Trenton, New-York, New-Haven, Hartford, Springfield, Providence, Boston, Albany, Rochester, Buffalo, &c., &c., throughout the adjacent Northern and Western States. And we both went to work "with a will," writing letters in spirit, like that to the Baltimore Patriot, to some twenty or twenty-five journals. This, together with several letters to prominent individuals, occupied us till long after sunrise. Between 6 and 7 A. M. we deposited our letters in the mail car. After breakfast, similar letters were written to Whig editors in Richmond, Norfolk, Winchester, and Raleigh. By the mail of that evening, the Baltimore Patriot was received at Washington, containing the letter addressed to it, accompanied by a vigorous editorial, denouncing the rejection of Mr. EVERETT in the strongest terms. Similar responses from day to day were received from all, or nearly all the journals to which we had written. The whole country seemed to have been impulsively aroused to avert an impending evil. And before action was had in Executive Session upon Mr. EVERETT'S nomination, a very wholesome atmosphere pervaded not only the Hall of Representatives, but the Senate Chamber. And Mr. EVERETT'S nomination, instead of being rejected, as was contemplated, was confirmed. Mr. CLAY, whose first intention was not to participate in the debate, was moved partly by the provocation and opportunity which Mr. KING'S threat gave him, and partly in respect to a public sentiment to which he was ever obedient, to make the eloquent and significant reply so happily remembered by Senator MOREHEAD. CHRISTOPHER MORGAN.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

NEW-YORK.

In the case of GEO. F. GRAY against FISK, Jr., BELDEN & CO., a motion was made recently before Judge SPENCER, in the Superior Court, to set aside the report of J. R. DOOLITTLE, referee, on the ground that it was rendered as the result of "impressions" obtained from the defendants outside the case. The action, as was fully reported in the TIMES, at the time of this motion, was to recover a large amount, as a balance alleged to be due to plaintiff from defendants, on numerous transactions in gold and stocks. Judge SPENCER has now rendered his decision denying plaintiff's motion, with $10 costs.

The trial of Dr. LUD for malpractice was, yesterday, resumed in the Hudson County Court of Quarter Sessions. Dr. YOULIN was sworn, the testimony elicited was similar to that offered by the other physicians. JAMES KELLY, the brother-in-law of Mr. COATES, whose death, it is alleged, was caused by Dr. LUND, next testified. His evidence concerned the directions of the physicians, and the facts connected with Mr. COATES' illness and death. Dr. CULVER was next called and cross-examined. None of the testimony differs materially from that before given. The evidence for the prosecution is not yet concluded, and the case will probably not be concluded before the latter part of next week.

JOHN SPALDIN, charged with stealing $15 from BRIDGET MURPHY, was acquitted in the Court of Oyer and Terminer yesterday. WALTER BURKE, a boy, was sent to the House of Refuge for stealing clothing worth $100. PATRICK DOYLE, accused of the same offense, was acquitted. WILLIAM HENRY, a colored man, who, during a little disorderly on election night, was sent up to the blind pen, discharged on habeas corpus.

The exhibition of those remarkable views, the Wonders of the Arctic Regions, by the oxy-hydrogen light, opens to-night at the Somerville Art Gallery, corner of Fifth-avenue and Fourteenth-street, with the full descriptive lecture by Dr. HAYES. The entire receipts to-night and to-morrow night will be given by Dr. HAYES and Mr. BRADFORD to the Young Woman's Home. The pictures are shown twenty feet length, and are wonderful beyond belief.

A very interesting entertainment took place last evening, at the Universalist Church, on Thirty-fifth-street, near Sixth-avenue, in the form of an allegory and tableaux representing the striking episodes in the life of Joseph and his brethren. The entertainment was under the direction of Mr. FROST, and the characters were represented by several young people of the Sunday-school. It will be repeated this evening.

Prof. C. F. CHANDLER lectured last evening at Steinway Hall on "Our Gas-lights," before a large and intelligent audience. He described the process of making gas, drew attention to the great superiority of gas-light over any other, and remarked on the various grades of advancement from its invention to the present time. Speaking of the qualities it possessed, which frequently sent forth a most unpleasant odor, and to which a large share of public attention was recently directed in this City, he reminded his hearers that this was in reality a public protection, for otherwise these substances when united with air create an explosive and endanger public safety.

A grand concert in aid of the organ fund of the First Presbyterian Church of Bootstar, N. J., takes place in the church this evening. The music will be furnished by Miss P. Hewlett, Miss Anna E. Cary, sopranos; Miss Rossiter, alto; Mr. William Mason, Mr. Edward Jardine, organists; Mr. Charles Hall, bass; Miss Pannie C. Beach, accompanist, and a chorus of twenty efficient voices, under the direction of Mr. JAMES A. JOHNSON.

KRONGER against FISK, GOULD, and others, for about $2,500,000, the amount claimed as difference between the purchases and sales of gold during the celebrated Black Friday gold panic. The commission authorizes the defense to take the evidence of EUGENE ZUNDY, a resident of Berlin, Prussia.

BROOKLYN.

PATRICK HAYDEN and TIMOTHY MADDEN, liquor dealers by profession, and dog-fighters from choice, were arrested, yesterday, on complaint of PATRICK HANDLEY, for highway robbery. He alleges that on the 20th of September last he held the responsible trust of stake-holder in a "canine combat," in which these gentlemen were principals on one side, and had $100 put up upon the result, while THOMAS GUDDINGS had up an equal amount on their opponent, and that, the fight having been broken up by roughs, these sportsmen attacked him with pistols, and forced him to "fork over" the amount named, in view of which he now charges them with the crime named. The case will be treated today by Justice WALSH.

The Board of Excise had the following liquor-dealers arrested, yesterday, for selling whisky without a license: THOMAS EVANS, "Maison Dorée," Montague-street, near Clinton; SAMUEL WHITMAN, Franklin-street, near Greene; JAMES W. HIFFLING, Union-avenue, corner of Box-street; THOMAS DILLON, Huron-street, near Union-avenue; HENRY REITZHEIMER, No. 172 Myrtle-avenue; JOHN MCNAMARA, corner Pearl and John streets. They will be tried today by Justices WALSH and VOORHIES.

PATRICK DUNN and JOHN O'NIEL, inspectors of election in Long Island City, were arrested yesterday for permitting interested parties to canvass the vote at the last election, and for closing the doors to the exclusion of the citizens while the canvass was going on. They were held to answer in $10,000 by Judge BENEDICT in the United States Court.

MINNIE J. MILLER sued CHARLES FOSTER and JANE, his wife, for $1,000 damages, alleged to have been inflicted on her by the malicious prosecution of the latter. The jury rendered a verdict yesterday in favor of the plaintiff for six cents.

The income of the Water Department at present is $660,000 per annum, out of which the interest on the water debt, $430,000, has to be paid, which leaves a margin of $170,000 to "run" the establishment; but such is the policy pursued that last year there was a deficiency of $113,000.

NEW-JERSEY.

A sad accident followed by one still worse occurred in Newark on Wednesday evening. ERASTUS HUGHEY, of the firm of VAN AMBURG & HUGHEY, was driving with two other men across the Morris and Essex Railroad at Nesbitt-street. The driver attempted to pass before an advancing train, but just as the wagon was on the track the men became alarmed and sprang from the wagon. Mr. HUGHEY caught his foot, fell on the track and was struck by the cow-catcher. He was taken up stunned, but not supposed to be mortally hurt, and was conveyed home on a stretcher. While going up some stairs to the entrance of his house, he rolled from the stretcher and fell heavily to the ground and died soon after. An inquest will be held.

The convention to consider the subject of a revision of the charter of Jersey City will meet on Monday evening. The charter of the city will probably undergo a very thorough revision this Winter, or be entirely thrown aside and replaced by a new one.

The report of the City Treasurer of Jersey City for the month ending Nov. 30, shows an expenditure of $324,000, with receipts amounting to $520,000, leaving a balance in favor of the city of over $195,000.

The examination of MATTHEW GARRIGAN, of No. 28 Mechanic-street, Newark, charged with having attempted to fire his place of business a few days since, commenced before Justice FARR, yesterday, and was adjourned till this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The Mayor of Newark has signed the ordinance for the paving of High-street with the Telford pavement, and the work of laying it will at once be commenced.

ERASTUS HUGHEY, of the firm of VAN AMBURG & HUGHEY, was driving with two other men across the Morris and Essex Railroad at Nesbitt-street. The driver attempted to pass before an advancing train, but just as the wagon was on the track the men became alarmed and sprang from the wagon. Mr. HUGHEY caught his foot, fell on the track and was struck by the cow-catcher. He was taken up stunned, but not supposed to be mortally hurt, and was conveyed home on a stretcher. While going up some stairs to the entrance of his house, he rolled from the stretcher and fell heavily to the ground and died soon after. An inquest will be held.

The convention to consider the subject of a revision of the charter of Jersey City will meet on Monday evening. The charter of the city will probably undergo a very thorough revision this Winter, or be entirely thrown aside and replaced by a new one.

The report of the City Treasurer of Jersey City for the month ending Nov. 30, shows an expenditure of $324,000, with receipts amounting to $520,000, leaving a balance in favor of the city of over $195,000.

The examination of MATTHEW GARRIGAN, of No. 28 Mechanic-street, Newark, charged with having attempted to fire his place of business a few days since, commenced before Justice FARR, yesterday, and was adjourned till this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The Mayor of Newark has signed the ordinance for the paving of High-street with the Telford pavement, and the work of laying it will at once be commenced.
